Conference Today Spurs G. M. Strike Peace Hopes

Knudsen Agrees to Meet Union Head at Parley With Governor.

Idle Roll in Plants Now Set at 114,000

Murphy Requests Delay in Serving Papers in Flint Riot.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Jan. 13.—Hopes of peace in strike-torn centers of the automobile industry rested tonight in a joint conference arranged for Thursday morning in the office of Frank Murphy, Governor of Michigan.

The Governor invited William S. Knudsen, executive vice-president of General Motors Corporation, and Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, to meet him "without condition or prejudice."

Murphy announced that both accepted late today.

For the first time since the union's strikes that threw more than 114,000 General Motors wage earners out of employment, the leaders will meet in a formal conference.

The Governor stepped into the strike situation again after the injury of 27 persons in a street battle between strikers and police Monday near the Fisher Body plant No. 2, at Flint.

He directed mobilization of nearly 3,000 members of the National Guard, 1,200 of whom were encamped near the riot scene tonight, to maintain public order.

Seven Held by Sheriff.

Sheriff Thomas Wolcott held seven men injured in the strike riot, and Prosecutor Joseph Joseph, of Flint, recommended warrants against three occupants of a union sound truck that was in the center of disorder.

Murphy, saying he was informed arrests of strike leaders were imminent, said he had telephoned authorities at Flint asking them to hold the warrants in abeyance.

"Strikers arrested now," the Governor said, "might believe they were being held as hostages to influence a conference between the two sides."

Martin headed for the conference tonight from Washington, where he had conferred with John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

At Washington, President Roosevelt received reports of the automobile strikes from Secretary Perkins and Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who described the situation as "jittery," and said he had not determined whether he would come to Detroit. Earlier McGrady conferred with Lewis and Martin.

The union called another strike in an attempt to close the allied Fisher Body and Chevrolet plants at St. Louis, Mo., but operations continued on a restricted basis.

Claim 3,000 Walked Out.

Delmond Garst, local union secretary, estimated 3,000 workers walked out; Vincent M. Dirkes, Fisher plant manager, said one assembly line was operating after 1,000 of the unit's 2,275 employes reported for work, and there was no statement from the Chevrolet division which employs approximately 2,000 men.

This strike differed from several other union efforts in General Motors plants, the workers staying away from work rather than "staying in."

The "sit-down" strikes have affected a number of automobile plants not connected with General Motors, the latest the United Brass & Aluminum Co. at Port Huron, Mich. It employs approximately 300 men of whom 75 remained in the plant this afternoon, demanding

Law Says Pay Up; Law Says No Pay; So Indian's in Jail

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Joseph Bighorse, wealthy Osage Indian, languished in jail today because one arm of the white man's law refused to let him do what another arm of the law said he must do—pay $2,000 alimony.

Bighorse has plenty of money, a hearty aversion to jails, and a sincere desire to pay Ethel Bighorse, a white woman, the alimony due her.

But after a district court awarded Ethel the money, the Osage Indian agency—which controls the fortunes of Indian wards made wealthy by oil money from tribal lands—ruled Bighorse could not pay.

Judge Harry Halley sent Bighorse to jail seven months ago for contempt of court. Luther P. Lane, the Indian's attroney, carried the case to the State supreme court. His appeal recently was denied. Saturday there will be a new hearing.

Child Labor Amendment Is Ratified by Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 13 (AP).—Kentucky ratified the proposed child labor amendment today.

Ratification was completed when the House adopted a resolution already approved by the Senate. The House vote, 59 to 24, followed an appeal by Gov. A. B. Chandler, who said 24 other States already have ratified the proposal and 12 more ratifications were necessary.

Ernest Simpson Sues Woman, Charging 'Slander' at Party

Denies He Got Money for Divorcing His American Wife.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 13.—Ernest Aldrich Simpson has charged a British society matron with slander in a sequel to the divorce granted to Wallis Simpson, his attorneys said today.

The action was directed, the attorneys asserted, against Mrs. Joan Sutherland, the wife of Lieut. Col. A. H. C. Sutherland. Simpson confirmed that notice of suit had been served.

It was based, attorneys indicated, on an allegation Mrs. Sutherland said Simpson received money for permitting the divorce action by his American-born wife.

The suit, sources close to him said, was begun to quiet what Simpson considered irritating discussion of the probationary divorce decree Mrs. Simpson obtained at Ipswich October 27.

Friends said he was determined the case should come to trial. They said he was willing to take the witness box, perhaps to tell his story of the circumstances that led to the divorce.

Authoritative informants disclosed the suit charged Mrs. Sutherland made the remarks at a luncheon party in London after the abdication of Edward VIII.

Religion, Reds Urged to Unite In Mutual Aims

Dr. Rainey Warns Churches to Meet Challenge of Communistic Trend.

Church colleges throughout the country must meet the challenge of communism by "injecting the spirit of religion into the communistic tendency," Dr. Homer P. Rainey, director of the American Youth Commission, warned 400 representatives of Christian educational institutions convening yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Observing that communism "seems to be fast gripping the attention of youth in America," Dr. Rainey concluded that "with those two forces (religion and communism) meeting and supporting each other, perhaps the world could have a new awakening, which would spell progress of a spiritual nature in the future."

The conflicts between religion and political movements and between the church and science formed the center of discussion for the educators who assembled to plan the future of the church-related college.

Religious Interest Grows.

Dr. G. Gould Wickey, of Washington, general secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education, an advisory organization which met with the college conference, declared there is a growing interest in the study of religion in American universities and colleges. He said 91 per cent of all non-tax supported colleges, institutions and universities in this country have some requirement in the field of religion for graduation.

His study, Dr. Wickey said, convinced him of the vital need of church colleges and of the necessity that "they completely breathe the spirit of religion on their campuses."

Discussing the historic quarrel between scientists and theologians, Dr. Karl F. Hersfeld, physics professor at Catholic University, charged theologians with too often teaching "as proved doctrines not established facts," but rather historical and traditional opinions accepted as facts."

Scientists, Dr. Hersfeld said, "claimed then to discredit religion, whereas they had only discredited by their discoveries certain faulty religious opinions."

Philosophy Is Help.

Dr. Charles F. Sanders, professor of philosophy at Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa., asserted that true philosophy, instead of decrying religion, can and should "render service to it."

Declaring that the State university campus affords a challenging opportunity to advance the Christian concepts, Dr. H. D. Bollinger, chairman of the National Commission of University Workers, advocated that "the churches of the country intensify the work of

Il Duce Greets Goering; Visit Held Unofficial

Berlin, However, Discloses Trip Is to Learn Views on Nazi Colonies.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Jan. 13 (AP).—Premier Mussolini welcomed Nazi Air Minister Hermann Wilhelm Goering to Rome tonight in a huge Fascist demonstration of Italo-German friendship.

Il Duce and a large group of Italian dignitaries went to the station to receive the German envoy and his wife. There were a band and guard of honor, despite the insistence of Fascist authorities that Goering's visit was wholly "unofficial."

The band played the Nazi marching song, "Horst Wessel," and the Fascist anthem as the welcoming party marched between German and Italian flags.

Seeks Duce's Views.

Berlin, Jan. 13 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's views on armaments and aid to German colonial ambitions took Air Minister Goering to Rome, it was disclosed tonight.

The Reich, it was emphasized, wanted to know just how far Mussolini would go along if Chancellor Hitler forced the colonial issue to decision in economic parleys with France.

In the meantime, Minister Hjalmar Schacht's scheduled trip to Paris was canceled. The economics minister will not go to Paris before Goering returns from Italy, asserted sources close to the latter.

A foreign office communique announced negotiations already were under way for a trade treaty between Germany and France, and this was confirmed yesterday in Paris.

Any economic agreement, it was believed here, also would include political commitments by Hitler on armaments and peace in Europe. Many believed definite action also might be taken toward returning to Germany some of her possessions lost in the World War, if Hitler pledged Germany to keep the peace.

Locomotive Kills Eight in Desert

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—A freight locomotive backing up in the Mojave Desert ran over a section crew, killing eight men, the Union Pacific Railroad said today.

The accident occurred 10 miles west of Brant, a small town on the main line, 75 miles west of Las Vegas, Nev.

The crew had been called out at 3 a. m. to clear snow from the tracks.

Odd Tale of Hoarded Jewels Unfolds as 5 Troves Pop Up

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—The story of the hoarded wealth of Joseph Rose, 64-year-old retired diamond broker, grew today by startling leaps and bounds and by safe deposit boxes, brimming with gems.

In a downtown bank, Assistant District Attorney William F. McGuiness, of Brooklyn, and Federal income tax agents late today discovered two more caches of jewelry. Score at this writing: Five.

After a hasty appraisal of the heap of diamond pins, rings, cuff links and lavalieres, the Federal men placed liens of $60,000 each on the two boxes.

Last week Rose, who has feigned poverty and accepted relief in an $18-a-month Brooklyn rooming house, told Kings County authorities that Louis Gorelick, his "best friend," had stolen his collection of $250,000 worth of unset diamonds.

Rose's story was that he had hidden the $250,000 in gems in his mattress because he did not want his estranged wife to learn of his wealth. He dated the alleged theft as occurring last July. He explained he hesitated to report the matter to police because he had been drawing relief.

At first, authorities doubted the story of the little man, whose sad, droopy moustached face and threadbare clothing belied his secreted wealth. Detectives, however, uncovered in succession three safe deposit boxes.

Against one of them, in a Jersey City bank, income tax agents attached a tentative tax lien of $129,000, although Rose and his 92-year-old father, Isaac Schusterman, of Freehold, N. J., appraised its sparkling contents as "trash."

The second box was opened by Rose himself, who showed District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan that it contained comparatively insignificant watches and trinkets. The third, opened today at another New York bank, also was attached by Federal agents.

Rose's attorney, former Magistrate Frederick J. Groehl, looked at the contents and gasped, "You couldn't buy the lot for $15,000."

British Fire At Rebel Ship Off Valencia

English Turn Guns on Cruiser Shelling Harbor Vessels.

Warship Aids Freighter Halted by Insurgents in Straits.

By the United Press.

Madrid, Jan. 13.—A British warship lying in Valencia harbor fired on a Spanish rebel cruiser which bombarded the port, the Mencheta News Agency said tonight.

Gibraltar reports said insurgent trawlers patrolling the straits stopped the British steamer Bramhill, questioned her captain and finally permitted the vessel to continue to Bilbao.

(London learned that the rebel trawler Larache fired one shot at the Bramhill, after which the Bramhill reduced speed and radioed for aid. The British cruiser Sussex went to the steamer's aid and ordered the trawler to "push off." The Sussex commander said he examined the Bramhill's papers and found them in order.

The Bramhill was en route to the Biscay loyalist port from Barcelona.

Identity of the British warship which opened fire was not given, but earlier reports said the depot ship Woolwich was believed to have fired on the rebels.

Eight persons were killed and 12 wounded in the rebel bombardment of Valencia.

From Peipignan it was reported that the cruiser Canarias attacked Valencia and engaged in a naval duel with two loyalist ships.

It was reported from the Straits that rebel trawlers halted the Soviet steamer Petrovich, in the Gulf of Vasconia.

Puzzled Over Action.

London, Jan 13 (AP).—Government sources disclosed tonight the administration is puzzled as to what action to take in connection with the reported seizure of British-owned copper mines in Spain by Gen. Francisco Franco, insurgent commander in chief.

The reports said the Rio Tinto and the Tharsis Copper companies had been compelled to sell their copper to Germany at 42 pesetas to the pound sterling. The current rate, fixed at Gibraltar, is 80 to 90 pesetas to the pound.

A French firm was reported to be faced with similar instructions.

Gen. Franco's denial that insurgent planes had bombed the British Embassy in Madrid last week was received skeptically in government circles, but usually informed persons said they believed no further action would be taken.

Refuse to Quit Embassy.

Madrid, Jan. 13 (AP).—Americans staying at the United States Embassy building turned down the State Department's suggestion that they leave Madrid today. Despite a warning that the building might be closed, 34 citizens living there clung to their temporary residence.

The Spanish civilian population was evacuating the city at the rate of 8,000 daily.

The government claimed success against the Fascists near Majadahonda, northwest of Madrid, but admitted the insurgents held control of Las Rozas, El Plantino and Aravaca, around the highway to El Escorial, Socialist-held town some 30 miles northwest of Madrid.

Shell Levels Consulate.

Havana, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Cuban state department announced today it had received advices that the Cuban consulate at Malaga had been destroyed in a bombardment.

Crews Burned Alive.

With Fascists, Outside Madrid, Jan. 13 (AP).—The crews of five government tanks were burned alive tonight in a futile Socialist assault on the Las Rozas front, northwest of Madrid. The five which ventured too close to the insurgent trenches were turned into flaming pyres.

Pope Disregards Doctor's Orders, Uses Wheelchair

Vatican City, Jan. 13 (AP).—Pope Pius, disregarding his doctor's warnings against all exertion, left his bed by wheel chair today and received visitors.

He was determined, Vatican prelates said, to use the chair henceforth so long as able.

The Pontiff was moved from the sick bed, to which he had been confined more than a month, despite new pains in his legs and increased difficulty in breathing.

Communist Journal Appears at Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 13 (AP).—A periodical named the Harvard Communist, published by the Harvard Branch, Young Communist League, made its first appearance in print today.

The publishers, who remain ananymous, wrote "it is significant that even in the comparatively 'liberal' atmosphere of Harvard University our efforts toward truth must remain unsigned."

Nazis Seek Old Bones.

Berlin, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Germany today appealed to her school children to become bone collectors to aid the Nazi campaign for raw materials. Handbills were distributed by the Organization for Protection Against Waste, asking children to deliver bones to glycerine and soap factories.

Battle Rages On Roosevelt Bureau Shifts

Split Congress Moves to Push Committee Study of Plan.

McCarl Hits President for 'Emasculation' of Audit System.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Congress divided on the President's reorganization proposals moved swiftly yesterday for a special committee study, as Former Comptroller General John Raymond McCarl lashed out furiously at what he termed "emasculation" of the independent accounting system.

Aloof from the raging controversy "merit system" recommendations of the President already were in bill form. Chairman Robert Ramspeck said he will ask his House Civil Service Committee to report out his measure for mass extension of the merit system, without hearings.

Meantime, a three-way committee repository for the President's report was recommended by House Appropriations Chairman James P. Buchanan, and received partial approval from the House Rules Committee.

Committee Approved.

The Rules group amended and approved Buchanan's bills setting up a special House committee of seven members, empowered to bring in privileged legislation, and a joint inquisitorial committee of House and Senate, on which they would serve also.

Senate approval of the House reorganization arrangement was not assured. Senate leaders reportedly were in favor of turning over the President's recommendations to the Senate Appropriations Committee for direct action.

McCarl, the stolid gray Scot who for 15 years kept his alert eyes and hands on the Federal purse strings, outspokenly criticized the President's proposal to substitute an auditor general, with power to make only post-audits of Government expenditures, for the office of comptroller general.

Hits at "Foundation."

He said the proposal "goes to the foundation of our plan of self-government," and is a "smoke screen" to relieve Congress of the means "to discharge its constitutional responsibilities to the Government."

Asking that functions of his former post "be strengthened and not crucified," McCarl said:

"When economy in Government is so utterly essential, due to our public debt condition, any wisdom in striking down our one money-saving agency is difficult to see."

McCarl's statement coincided with a Capitol controversy on many of the proposals, and followed attacks on the new auditing plan led by Senator Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia, chairman of the special Senate Committee on Reorganization.

Byrd's committee will meet today to discuss the report and receive the Virginian's recommendations for eliminating duplications in Federal lending functions. The Senate Banking Committee yesterday voted to extend the life of the RFC, largest of the Federal lending agencies, to June 30, 1939.

The Administration's recommendations for improvement of Federal personnel and the fostering of "careers" in the service as yet have not been dragged into the vortex of the general reorganization controversy.

Anxious that the "merit" proposals receive consideration by Congressional committees trained in civil service needs, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service group yesterday asked the Rules Committee not to deprive him of jurisdiction.

Logan in Senate.

Ramspeck, in the House, and Senator M. M. Logan, in the Senate, already have introduced slightly different bills for extending the merit system, largely in line with the President's recommendations. Ramspeck introduced another yesterday to extend provisions of the classification act to the field service.

Anxious to salvage the personnel recommendations from the Administration's report, the Georgian will ask his committee to report out these bills almost immediately and strive for House action early in the session. Congressional reaction to the plan to set up a single civil service administrator, aided by a part-time, nonsalaried board, dis-

Patterson Is Reported Recalled As Cuban Ambassador to U. S.

Havana Fails to Explain Action; Pedro Fraga Slated for Post.

By Sidney Olson.

The Cuban Ambassador to the United States, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui, was recalled last night by the Cuban state department, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Havana.

No explanation for the unexpected removal was given.

Informed sources indicated Pedro Martinez Fraga, present Cuban Minister to London, will replace Patterson. Fraga is a brother of Antonio Martinez Fraga, one of the three accusers of the recent President Miguel Mariano Gomez, who was impeached and removed from office.

Leave for Cuba.

Patterson left yesterday for Cuba, but intimates here insisted he knew nothing of the impending removal order. It was said he had told diplomatic friends here the visit was routine, as he was "the best of friends" with Gen. Rafael Montalbo, secretary of state in the new government set up by Col. Fulgencio Batista.

Fraga is virtually unknown here.

Tax Valuations By Fiscal Unit Amaze 3 Aides

Real Estate Men Deny Assessments Are Low; 'Unfairness' Hit.

Three Washington real estate men who served as appraisers of local property for the Jacobs committee, yesterday expressed amazement at the committee's deductions, as J. L. Jacobs, director of the fiscal relations study, called on members of the House District Committee, which is planning an inquiry.

The real estate men—Morton J. Luchs, Edward K. Jones and Lansing Valk—contradicted the committee's conclusions that the ratio of realty assessments to true value is low. They said their examination of 14 properties showed assessments to be very close to actual values.

Jacobs, meanwhile, told Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, that he will furnish any information requested or appear before the committee when the inquiry begins.

Basis Contradictory.

The fiscal report indicates conclusions as to Washington's low realty assessments were reached on the basis of appraisals of 76 pieces of property. The real estate men credited with making the study said they examined only 14.

Luchs said he made five appraisals, comprising a $500,000 commercial building on F street, a row house in Petworth, an apartment house on Wisconsin avenue, a semi-detached home on Cathedral avenue, and a detached residence in Chevy Chase.

His reports on the four pieces of residential property showed them to be assessed at 96 per cent of true value.

Assessed at 71 Per Cent.

The Jacobs report stated that residences in Washington are assessed at about 71 per cent of actual value.

Luchs appraised the business property at $450,000, the assessment bing $450,262. The Jacobs committee states that business property is assessed at only 87 per cent of its value.

Valk, who appraised three properties and listed about 50 others at approximate valuations, charged the committee with unfairness in its investigation.

Crash Injuries Kill Johnson; 3 Hurt Critically

Explorer's Wife Suffers Leg Fracture; Pilot Tells of Blind Flying.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 13.—A routine lecture trip by air brought ironic death today to Martin Johnson, intrepid explorer who followed the wildest jungle trails unscathed.

Johnson, 52, died of injuries suffered yesterday when a luxurious Western Air express airliner plunged to earth within 15 miles of its Los Angeles destination. The explorer's death was the second among the 13 men and women aboard the plane when it dropped to the snow-covered foothill north of here.

Johnson's equally famous wife, Osa, his constant companion for 26 years, was seriously injured. She was not informed immediately of her husband's death.

The tragedy bore out one of the last public comments of the big game hunter who used a camera as his weapon. Just before the takeoff from Salt Lake City of this fatal flight, he remarked:

"America, probably because it is the most civilized place in the world, is the most dangerous."

Another Passenger Killed.

His death followed that of a fellow passenger, James A. Braden, president of a Cleveland, Ohio, ink company.

Three others are in a critical condition. They are E. E. Spencer of Chicago; A. L. Loomis, of Omaha, and Clifford P. Owens, co-pilot, of Glendale, Calif. The others who were aboard the plane were recuperating.

Mrs. Johnson shared the adventurer's views of the dangers of civilization.

"I actually feel uneasy when away from the jungles," she commented just before the plane left Salt Lake City Monday.

The air transport pancaked on a snow-covered hillside. It was described as a heroic move of the pilot, W. W. Lewis, in making the forced landing after being lost in the sleet and snow swirls.

"I was trapped in the fog," said Lewis. "I had no idea I was so close to the ridge."

"Suddenly, out of the blackness, I saw the hill looming in front of me," Lewis said.

Pancaked the Plane.

"I did the only thing I could do then—I pancaked the plane on the slope.

"I shut off the motors with one hand and pointed the nose of the ship sharply upward with the other. There was a terrific crash. I passed out."

Circus Lioness Sends Trainer to Hospital

Peru, Ind., Jan. 13 (AP).—Terrell Jacobs, 36, an animal trainer at the Ringling Circus quarters here, was in a serous condition today from deep wounds inflicted by a lioness. Serum was being rushed here today from Chicago.

Four "green" animals were released into a cage in which Jacobs was training an act late yesterday, and one of them attacked him. He was mauled badly before being rescued.

$100,000 Dope Cache Seized, Largest in New York History

The largest opium seizure ever made in New York was reported yesterday by the Treasury Department when it revealed the arrest of three Chinese and the confiscation of $100,000 worth of contraband.

Taken Tuesday night from the British steamship Maroh after one of the smugglers had attempted to bribe the ship's watchman, the opium was contained in 600 half-pound tins stuffed into a dozen burlap bags.

According to the Treasury, 11 of the bags were ferreted out by ship's officers before the arrival of 15 customs agents, whose search resulted in discovery of the twelfth bag. The Maron docked in Brooklyn last Friday from Savanah, Ga.

The three Chinese crew members placed under arrest will be arraigned before a United States commissioner in Brooklyn today on charges of violating the narcotics import and export law, according to the Associated Press.

The captain of the Maron communicated with the Customs Service and said he suspected contraband narcoitcs were aboard his ship. Before the raiding party arrived, crew members working at the captain's direction had uncovered 11 burlap bags loaded with 5-tael tins which had been secreted in a cargo hatch, the Treasury reported.

It was said here that the British steamer had touched at many Oriental ports before reaching Savannah, whence it sailed January 6 for New York, and that she long has been suspected of carrying drugs in the illicit traffic. She has been searched numerous times in American ports, a Treasury memorandum said.

The steamer Washington, which docked in New York the same day as the Maron, was boarded last Saturday by customs agents and 16 pounds of smoking opium seized. Hamburg was her port of departure.

U. S. Agents Grill Man Seized in Everett; Auto Abandoned.

Knife Used to Stab Youth Is Sought

Fingerprint Comparison of Former Prisoner Asked of State.

Arrest Is Made.

By the United Press.

Everett, Wash., Jan. 13. — A suspect in the kidnap-murder of 10-year-old Charles Mattson was reported being questioned here tonight by Federal agents.

An unimpeachable source said the suspect was arrested shortly after a blood-stained car was picked up on a street here and a hammer that might have been the death weapon was found near where Charles' body was tossed in a lonely copse.

Chief William Cole, of the Washington State police, reported one of his patrolmen found a hammer near the battered body of the murdered lad. Although it was not stained with the child's blood, it was believed to be the murder weapon.

Convict Hunted.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 13.—The name of a former California convict flashed tonight out of the widening hunt for the kidnap-killer of little Charles Mattson while Everett police threw a close guard about an abandoned automobile supposedly containing blood-soaked clothing.

Officials at Folsom disclosed Federal manhunters were seeknig Fred Orrin Haynes, "repeater" convict. The California State Bureau of Identification said it had been asked to check Haynes' fingerprints.

Police streiched canvas about the automobile at Everett to shield it from view.

They impounded the machine last night when a North-End resident reported it had been parked in front of his home since last Sunday night, possibly about the time the nude, frozen body of the 10-year-old victim was dumped into the snow 6 miles away.

The resident said the car contained rags or clothing stained apparently by blood.

The car, reported stolen Friday night from Verne Williams, of Everett, was said to have tires of the type used by the abductor in his gruesome journey with the body. Williams reported the car had no license plates when stolen. It bore a stolen license number when found.

Guarded by Police.

Late today officers blocked the entrance to the garage with a patrol car and posted armed officers about the machine while State police examined it.

The Folsom warden said Haynes entered the prison March 6, 1931, on a Los Angeles charge of receiving stolen property and was released October 6, 1934. He previously had served two years in San Quentin on a burglary charge.

Haynes and a convict "pal," Emerson Smith, once were arrested on a kidnaping charge, it was reported.

Examination of the slain boy's body revealed new proof of the kidnaper's brutality and indications that he might have been almost insane with fear as he sought to collect the $28,000 ransom demanded.

Officers disclosed little Charles was stabbed in the back with a long knife; that he grappled with his killer and finally was put to death with a blow that crushed the side of his head—possibly from a hammer, a pistol butt or a length of pipe.

This together with his incoherence when telephoning Dr. Mattson about the ransom money suggested the kidnaper was almost insane with fear and obviously desperate.

Tacoma police investigated the robbery of a suburban bank of $1,500 in currency and silver this morning on the theory that the abductor in his desperation might have undertaken it to obtain money for a getaway. The robber escaped despite rifle fire from the bank's employes.

The kidnaper's reported terror and incoherence led officers to believe some frantic act of his might lead them directly to him within a few hours.

The man has been frequently described as so afraid while he held the boy captive that he refused to make any real effort to collect the $28,000.

Additional evidence of the man's

Van Sweringen Note Issue Seen As Fraudulent

New York Firm Is Accused of Concealing Write-up of $25,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, accused the Guaranty Co. of New York yesterday of concealing an "arbitrary write-up" of $25,000,000 in advertising a $30,000,000 note issue for a Van Sweringen enterprise.

The Guaranty Co. was formerly an underwriting affiliate of the Guaranty Trust Co.

Wheeler, chairman of a special committee investigating financing operations of the late Van Sweringen Brothers, of Cleveland, described the transaction in question as "close to the line." He said "it could not be done under the law without informing the investing public, without subjecting the company to liability."

Books Seen Falsified.

"I have prosecuted cases for using the mails to defraud," Wheeler said, "and this statement is not a proper disclosure."

Wheeler described the entry as "falsifying the books to give the company greater liquidity than it had."

The loan was to the Van Sweringen Corporation, a holding company for Cleveland Real Estate Properties. It was in the form of five-year 6 per cent gold notes, and the issue was sold in April, 1930, by a syndicate headed by the Guaranty Co.

The write-up, Wheeler said, had been made on the books of the Cleveland Terminals Building Co., a subsidiary of the Van Sweringen Corporation. Wheeler contended the Terminals concern was insolvent.

The Senator maintained the public had lost $15,758,004 on the $30,000,000 note issue.

Company Head Testifies.

Joseph R. Swan, former president of the Guaranty Co., and now president of Edward B. Smith & Co., of New York, was testifying when Wheeler made the accusation. Swan contended the write-up was jutified in view of an apparisal of the properties "by a real estate expert in whom we had great confidence and by people in Cleveland who knew values.

Wheeler introduced a memorandum which he said showed J. P. Morgan and Co. considered the financing operation "shaky," and would have no part in it.

"Is your company in the habit of writing up real estate values the day before getting out a prospectus for the sale of stocks and bonds without disclosing it to the public?" the Senator asked Swan.

"I don't think so," Swan replied. "I wouldn't do this business today, but things were different in 1930." He previously testified the company had "made a mistake" in handling the issue.

Coast Editor Freed In Libel of Roosevelt

San Jose, Calif., Jan. 13 (AP).—The case against P. Milton Smith, elderly Mountain View editor accused of libeling President Roosevelt in an editorial, was dismissed today because of "insufficient evidence."

"My impression is that the allegations in the complaint are not libelous," said Justice of the Peace Grandin H. Miller. The complaint was based on an editorial November 27 in the 68-year-old editor's newspaper, the weekly Register-Leader, in which he said the President was "a man universally hated for a smiling hypocrite, a mountebank of the lowest order and the biggest 'false alarm' since the creation of man." Santa Clara County officials brought the libel charge.

Roosevelt Deserves Credit for Scorning Any Half-Way Measures in Advocating Reform.

By Franklyn Waltman

THERE is one thing for which you must take off your hat to President Roosevelt and give him a sweeping salute—when he undertakes to do something, he does it in a big and grandiose way. He does not nibble around the edges of a situation nor does he let timidity about the ultimate perfection of some parts of his proposals keep him from driving through to objectives which he seeks to reach.

WALTMAN.

This characteristic of the President has been demonstrated on so many occasions during the last four years that his proposed reorganization program should not have caused surprise. But cause surprise it did, not alone among the rank and file of Federal employes and the general public, but among the members of Congress and his departmental chiefs. Some are still gasping over the sweep and magnitude of what Mr. Roosevelt proposed.

It is doubtful whether Congress will approve the Roosevelt reorganization program in toto. But it seems a safe bet that the major part of that program will be enacted into law and thus a real and unduly delayed step toward reorganization of the Federal Government will have been taken. Other Presidents from time to time have sought to patch up the creaking, lumbering Federal machine in modest programs and they got nowhere. Mr. Roosevelt seeks to make over the entire Government organization and because he asks for so much, undoubtedly will come off with a great deal.

It is doubtful whether anyone, aside from the President and the Brownlow committee, would indorse enthusiastically every proposal in Mr. Roosevelt's program. But on the other hand, most objective students of the Federal Government would applaud the program as a whole as far better than anything which it could be expected a President of the United States, subject to political pressure as he is, would propose.

The many futile efforts which have been made during the last 50 years to end the spoils system in the Federal Government; to end the waste, inefficiency and overlapping functions in the operation of this Government and to bring modern and orderly procedure out of confusion and antiquated practices, have disillusioned many persons that nothing substantial ever could be done about these evils.

Perhaps it is too early to start cheering over something being done. But Mr. Roosevelt and the Brownlow committee have made a mighty good start, and if the President, with his enormous prestige and popularity, stands up and fights for the reform of the Federal Government that he proposes, his name will have an especial place in history on this account alone.

The more spectacular proposals in the Brownlow report, such as creation of two new major departments, extending the merit system to the entire Federal personnel, except those in policy-making positions, the abolition of the Comptroller General's office and the placing of all so-called independent agencies under the administrative control of a Cabinet officer, have attracted most of the attention.

But a very important proposal in the report relates to improving the efficiency of the White House staff through the establishment of a staff of executive assistants to the President. The President of the United States is responsible for everything that happens within the Federal Government. He is held responsible for everything of major importance that happens in the Nation. He is supposed to bring prosperity and prevent depressions. He is held responsible for the country's international relations and on him rests whether the Nation will be involved in another war. In the last four years he has become the fountain head of the "more abundant life" for average men and women.

And yet his present staff of assistants is smaller than that of many Governors and Mayors—smaller than the staffs of railroad presidents and industrial corporations. A great part of his day is taken up with conferences with every Tom, Dick and Harry in the Federal Government. Each of the chiefs of the 95 independent agencies regards it as his right to confer personally with the President on any subject that he wishes.

Spending his day listening to tales of woe and seeking to settle petty quarrels, the President spends his evenings on correspondence and trying to devise policies. Mr. Roosevelt is authority for the statement that under the present system the President does not have time in which to think—and yet he is supposed to do our national thinking for us.

The White House grind has broken most Presidents. It is rapidly aging Mr. Roosevelt. For proof of that examine a photograph of him today and one taken in March, 1933—and he is a man of great physical vigor. If the proposed reorganization program did nothing more than improve the lot of the President and give him more time to consider deliberatively current problems, it would be worth while.

To the objection on Capitol Hill that there is no immediate, substantial economy involved in his reorganization program, Mr. Roosevelt tells the story of a farmer who could not make both ends meet. An agricultural expert found that he had several barns, a wagon-house, separate buildings for farm equipment and other outhouses. He proposed that the farmer could escape from his dilemma by erecting one large barn to house all his livestock and equipment and tear down the remainder. Although this scheme in the beginning increased the farmer's expenses, in the end it saved him large repair bills and permitted him to get more work done, the President explained.

One businessman, speaking of the reorganization program, happily predicted it would keep Congress busy for the remainder of the session and thus keep it from passing legislation harassing business. We wonder whether Mr. Roosevelt gave any thought to the old adage that the way to keep a ferocious dog quiet is to give him a bone to gnaw on.

placing the Civil Service Commission, continued cool.

E. Claude Babcock, one-time secretary of the Civil Service Commission, former president of the American Federation of Government Employes, and now head of the United Civil Service Employes, said in a statement that "the new Civil Service Board should be full time to continually supervise the judicial functions of civil service work."

Complainants Win.

When Buchanan went before the Rules Committee yesterday he asked a "permanent" standing reorganization setup on Capitol Hill, not only to handle the President's recommendations, but to keep a constant watch on the unwieldy governmental machine.

But the Rules Committee decided only on a special committee arrangement which would lapse in two years, following complaints of standing committee chairmen, who said they would be deprived of their duties.

Buchanan told the group bluntly that no large savings could be expected from the President's plan, although it "might bring about a more orderly Government."

What is needed, he said, is the power to cut off unneeded agencies. The committee he proposed, he said, could save between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 the first year by eliminating "15 to 20 agencies."

O'Connor Active.

Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the Rules Committee, echoed his belief that the President's committee report would abolish no functions, but merely transfer them to permanent agencies.

"There is no such animal as a 'temporary' agency, at least not in the mind of the Brownlow Committee (which framed the President's report)," he said.

Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, told the group he thought the President's report would increase expenses, if carried out.

Both Buchanan and Chairman John J. Cochran, of the House Expenditures Committee, said members of the special reorganization committee will need "intestinal fortitude" to net any savings.

Warns of "Pressure."

"You have no idea of the pressure that will be brought by persons holding jobs and interested in keeping them, rather than in efficiency," said Cochran.

"The thing to do is to approve a bill and then vote it out. Let the hell come later. That's the way to do it. This time you will have the President."

Earlier, Speaker Bankhead told reporters he thought the Congress would approve the President's general reorganization proposals, possibly with modifications. He laid emphasis on possible efficiencies, admitting no substantial economy is involved.

On proposed personnel reforms, Speaker Bankhead said he personally would be glad if such patronage as still exists is eliminated, because it is "a big headache."

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, who criticized the President's committee's report as lacking in clarity, will call a conference of Senate Republicans to determine their stand. McNary favors simplification in Government, but is opposed to the accretion of executive powers he says is implied in the report.

Hopkins Explains Aid Fund to House

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, appeared before a House Appropriations sub-committee yesterday to explain President Roosevelt's request for $790,000,000 to finance "recovery and relief" for the next five months.

Consideration of the appropriation measure was begun as Western and other Congressional blocs planned a campaign to increase the amount to the billion mark. Others on Capitol Hill were seeking to reduce it.

Hopkins, who handles billions, was accompanied by Corrington Gill, assistant administrator and statistical expert. The hearing was behind closed doors.

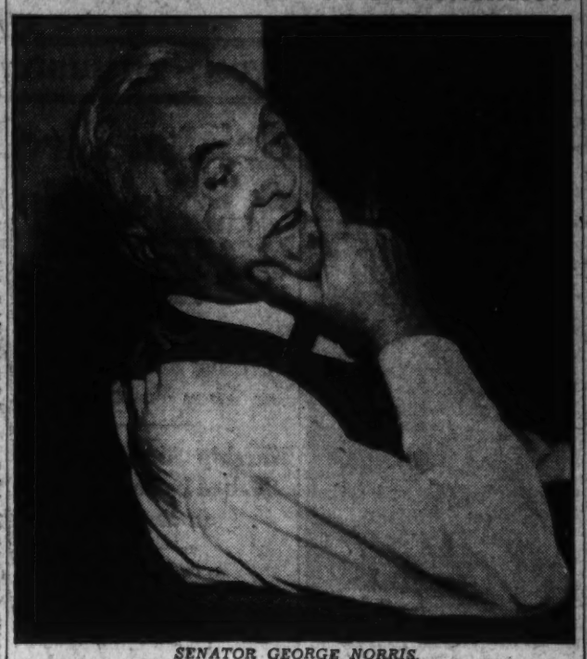
Norris to Preside at Parley On Amendment of Constitution



SENATOR GEORGE NORRIS.

Veteran Nebraska Senator Will Lead Fight for Broader U. S. Powers; Says Supreme Court Is 'Out of Touch.'

By the Associated Press.

At an age when most men are enfeebled or in retirement, Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, stepped yesterday into the thick of the current fight to broaden Federal powers over industry and agriculture.

The 75-year-old independent, whose re-election over a Democratic opponent was urged by President Roosevelt last fall, agreed to preside at a conference on amendment of the Constitution.

Author of the recently adopted "lame duck" amendment and Congressional father of the New Deal's vast power development in the Tennessee Valley, Norris told a group which solicited his leadership:

"This Supreme Court is out of touch with the people. It has constituted a continuous constitutional convention, ruling on merits of legislation. But those who would deal with the situation first must compromise among themselves."

The unofficial group which initiated the conference plan and asked Norris to aid it were Edwin S. Smith of the National Labor Relations Board; Henry T. Hunt, Interior Department lawyer; W. Jett Lauck, adviser to John L. Lewis, of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Morris L. Ernst, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union.

Whether President Roosevelt knew of the preparations was a subject of speculation at the Capitol. Smith and Hunt said they acted as individuals, and probably would not be among the official sponsors, since they are members of the Administration.

A sponsorship committee of about 50 will be recruited at once.

A brochure to be used in calling the conference construes the last election as a mandate for wage and hour and other labor legislation, the end of farm surpluses, reduction of farm tenancy, encouragement of farmers' co-operatives, consumer protection and stabilization of purchasing power.

Norris was not ready as yet to say what specific proposals he would favor principally.

In the past, however, he has suggested that a unanimous or a 7-to-2 vote by the Supreme Court be required to invalidate laws.

The conference is planned for seven or eight weeks from now.

Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, said after a White House conference yesterday President Roosevelt will send to Congress shortly a detailed program of public works.

The Public Works Administration has a balance of around $200,000,000 in a revolving fund and the new budget proposes to expend more than $400,000,000.

Ode to OTARD

O IS FOR OCTOGENARIAN

Thumbs his nose at vegetarians.
He calls for a steak, not carrots or nuts,
And lights Coronas off the butts.

How does Otho do it at eighty?
By watching out for automobiles,
And a glass of Otard after meals.

Slaying Victim Was Engaged, Friends Report

Calvert Hills' Girl Near Hysteria as She Learns of Fiance's Death.

William Francis Boarman, victim of the triple-slaying and suicide which wrecked the Boarman home on Queens Chapel road, had become secretly engaged last week it was learned yesterday as investigators reconstructed the tragedy.

He had planned to marry Carol Gooden, of Calvert Hills, in June, members of the slain youth's fraternity, Alpha Gamma Rho, said.

Miss Gooden, a secretary employed by Dun & Bradstreet in Washington, was on the verge of hysteria at her home yesterday.

She first learned of the tragedy when, worried over her fiance's failure to call for her Tuesday night, she telephoned his home.

Corbin E. Boarman, 65, retired telephone company employe, who slew his wife, one daughter and his son before hurling himself to death beneath the wheels of a Baltimore & Ohio freight train, was suffering from a vicious mental disorder, doctors believed.

In Apparent Stupor.

Members of the family had become worried over his condition during the last several weeks. Acquaintances said that he seemed to have lost all interest in life.

Because of his fondness for gardening, members of the family prevailed on him recently to purchase a small farm, which they hoped would arouse him from his apparent stupor.

Results of an autopsy performed at Gasch's undertaking establishment in Hyattsville early yesterday by Dr. Oscar Lavine, of Mount Rainer, revealed that a .32-caliber pistol, a butcher knife and several blunt instruments, including two hammers, had been used in the slayings.

Dr. Lavine said Mrs. Frances Boarman, 60, probably had been struck with a hammer and then slashed in the neck. Her skull was fractured. Either injury could have caused death, it was said.

Son, Daughter Shot.

Margaret, 26, had been shot in the head, the autopsy showed. William had been shot twice in the head and his skull fractured by the blow from a heavy instrument.

They probably had been dead no longer than an hour when Officer William Gray, of the Prince Georges County police, broke into the house through a kitchen window to discover the tragedy, Dr. Lavine said.

While relatives completed funeral arrangements for her mother, father, brother and sister, Mary D. Boarman, who escaped the fate of the rest of her family when her father's gun jammed as he attempted to shoot her for the second time, lay seriously injured in Sibley Hospital. Her fiance, William F. Ryan, 2612 Twelfth street northeast, who missed death by the same turn of fate that saved Mary, was able to assist relatives plan the final rites. He sustained a flesh wound on the side of the face as he wrested the pistol from the elder Boarman.

Requiem mass will be said at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Brookland, over the bodies of all four members of the family tomorrow at 10 a. m. Relatives had not decided last night where burial will be held.

Spaniard Who Forged 3 Checks as Youth of 16 Faces Deportation Despite Good Behavior

Wife Pleads for Respected New Yorker Who Has Put Past Behind.

For forging his name to three checks when he was a youngster in Cuba, Joseph Pellon, now a married and long-respected resident of New York, faces deportation after hearings at the Labor Department here yesterday.

Decision on his case was reserved, after a heartfelt plea by his attractive wife, but so far the imigration authorities have never relaxed the rigid deportation laws no matter how great the "hardship."

Pellon informed them the checks had been made good by his father, and since his entry into the United States in 1917 he has been an industrious and honest worker, who now has a wife, an $8,000 home, and is supporting a 74-year-old mother.

Mrs. Pellon described how, throug h her insistence, her husband became a naturalized United States citizen, became enmashed in the immigration laws, and now faces deportation, his home and lifetime employment taken from him, and his wife forced to leave hte land in which she has lived 30 years.

"We were married four years ago," she said, shaken after her testimony. "January 15 is our wedding anniversary. Shortly after we married I asked Joe to become a citizen. He took out his first papers. When it came time to take out his second papers last April, he couldn't get them. He was told there would be some delay.

"The next thing we knew, he was being questioned by an inspector, and Joe told them all about the checks. He had stolen the money when he was just a boy of 16. His father made it good. He's never stolen anything since. Now they want to deport him.

"I've been heartbroken. I haven't been able to sleep for weeks. I was planning for a fine American husband with complete citizenship rights. Joe's very much interested in politics and government, and wanted to vote for Roosevelt. That's one of the reasons he took out papers. Now they want to put him out of the country for something he did as a kid. Gee, I stole apples and did all kinds of things when I was a child that I would never do now, things I've forgotten. But Joe was honest and told them, and now what does he get for it?

"Of course I'll go with him wherever he goes. If he has to go back to Spain to live, that's where I'll go too, even if we do get killed in the war. I'll follow my husband, no matter what happens."

Post Staff Photo.

MRS. JOSEPH PELLON.

Pellon was born in Spain and went to Cuba when he was 9 years old. He remained a Spanish citizen, it was said.

Mrs. Pellon is a "personal shopper" in a large New York department store. She and her husband have bought and paid for their $8,000 home and have piled up a $1,500 savings account. For the past 19 years his record in this country has been exemplary, demonstrating thrift, industry and respectability. The Labor Department concedes this.

Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, became interested in the case and wrote Secretary Perkins, asking for whatever consideratoin she could give Pellon, who is a translator for Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., of Nek Jersey. Pellon's employers have certified as to his reliability of character, as have numerous other witnesses. For his single misstep he was never indicted, prosecuted or imprisoned. But theact which he voluntarily confessed is one of "moral turpitude," therefore he is ineligible for admission to the country and must be deported, according to the law.

Band Leader's Story Is Told At Murder Trial

Conductor Denies Charges, Claims Girl Committed Suicide.

By the Associated Press.

Norwich, Conn., Jan. 13.—In a 150-year-old "town hall," with three judges and no jury listening to the evidence, the prosecution opened its case in the murder trial of Orchestra Leader Robert Simpson today by offernig police witnesses to tell Simpson's own story of how 17-year-old Ellen Sullivan died.

On a hot early morning in July she plunged 25 feet to a concrete sidewalk outside the dance hall on the Long Island shore where the 23-year-old Simpson led hi- ors chestra. The State claims Simpson attacked and killed her in the darkened Danceland Casino on July 18.

Small-Town Atmosphere.

The first day of the trial wen on in a homely atmosphere with attorneys bickering pleasantly, the townspeople out in force and amid an air of informality that once heard harassed New London Police Sergt. Dennis L. Cavanaugh protest to Cross-Examining Attorney Morris Lubchansky:

"Aw, now, Morris——"

Sergt. Cavanaugh, under the examination of State Prosecutor Arthur H. Brown, told the story that Simpson has stuck to ever since his arrest six months ago. Summed up it was this:

Simpson, hero of many girls of the vicinity who came to the Casino to dance to his music, had a date with Miss Sullivan after the dance was over.

They had two glasses of beer together—so ran Simpson's version as given by the officer—and she became ill, so he climbed through a window in the darkened dance hall and let her in so she might recover.

Then, continued the story, Miss Sullivan, a pretty telephone operator, became hysterical, told the band leader he must marry her or she would commit suicide.

"Why should I do that?" Simpson said re demanded.

Then, the Simpson story went on, the musician went for some one to help quiet the girl and, as he left the biulding, heard the crash of breaking class and the thud of her body landing on the sidewalk below the dance hal lwindows.

Bathing Suit Identified.

The girl's mother and father sat in the stil courtroom as the girl's handbag and the suit she wore swimming while waiting for the dance to end—found in the dance hall near the shattered windows—were identified.

Tomorrow the defense wil go into action with the testimony of Dr. Charles Kaufman, New London physician who treated Miss Sullivan and aided with the autopsy.

Coroner Edward G. McKay, in the report that led to Simpson's arrest, said examination of the girl's body and clothing showed she had been assaulted shortly before her fall. He said the position in which she was found on the sidewalk indicated she had been pushed through the window.

China Ceremoniously Kills Five Sellers of Narcotics

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, China, Jan. 13.—On the broad marble steps of the great purple-domed Temple of Heaven, with a crowd of 50,000 morbid onlookers gathered in the courtyard below, five traffickers in narcotics were shot to death today.

The executions, staged in the awe-inspiring precincts near old Peiping's southern wall, where the emperors of China for 500 years have held their annual communion with heaven, marked the most drastic and dramatic action yet taken in the government's campaign against habit-forming narcotics.

Before today only one dealer in narcotics had been executed in spite of the government's edict to users last year, "Be cured by New Year's or die!"

The killings today were carried out with almost as much ceremony as marked the emperors' worship of the Supreme Being through China's last two dynasties.

Hours before the five died the throng began to fill the vast courtyard, which stretches between the three-tiered temple and the marble altar of heaven. They waited patiently and with almost no show of emotion.

As preliminary entertainment they were treated to a ceremonious burning of 10,000 ounces of assorted narcotics seized since the New Year. This lasted two hours.

The climax came when the five condemned men were dragged to the temple steps, heavily shackled. There they were forced to pose for photographs, which the authorities planned to give the widest circulation.

One victim, of sterner fiber than his fellows, shouted:

"Take all you want."

The others cringed as they awaited the end. The executioners marched the condemned five to the chosen spot, forced them to kneel and sent a bullet through the base of each skull.

The bodies were dumped unceremoniously in crude wooden coffins and carried off to the city's cemetery for criminals.

The crowd looked on intently but silently.

Havana Recalls Dr. Patterson As U. S. Envoy

wife of the attache of the Swiss Legation, and blonde Olga Patterson, his hostess at the Cuban Embassy.

The Embassy's telephone went unanswered last night, but Mme. Schlatter protested the news, exclaiming "It's not true" audibly near the telephone after her husband had said she was indisposed and would be unable to talk.

Speaking through her husband, Mme. Schlatter insisted repeatedly that she knew nothing of the development, and she was heard to remark sharply several times, "It could'nt be! Ah, the newspapers!"

The report from Havana did not equivocate or say that "it was reliably learned," etc. The flat statement was made Patterson had been recalled. Sources close to our own State Department said the news, if confirmed, would be received with dismay, as Patterson was considered an exceptionally able ambassador. Officials hoped unofficially last night that possibly the ambassador was being "promoted," but since there are no jobs in the Cuban state department higher than the American post, except the secretaryship, which is occupied at present, they were forced to conclude otherwise.

Patterson is known to Washington society as a perfect host, who serves rare and strange dishes with perfectly matching wines; as a dog-lover who trudges through Rock Creek Park with his pet chow dog, Teddy, whom he found when he was Minister to London, and as very probably the best dancer for his weight ad age in the entire diplomatic set.

He is prematurely gray, of middle height and years, with a crisp white mustache, even teeth and bright blue eyes from his part-Scotch ancestors. He has a son in the embassy, Dr. Enrique Patterson; he has been Ambassador since December, 1934, while Cuba has had six Presidents, and his name often has been linked romantically with that of Mrs. Campbell Pritchett, Washington matron.

Child Suffering Of Dread Disease Reported Better

Six-year-old Dale Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Gray, of 1808 Kalorama road northwest, who has been near death at Children's Hospital for the past week with spinal meningitis, rallied yesterday and physicians said her chances for recovery were excellent.

No blood transfusions were necessary, hospital authorities said yesterday, but if she suffers a relapse, volunteers will be asked.

Her serious illness resulted from influenza. It is believed that the blood of a person who has recovered from that disease in the past week may be needed if a crisis arises.

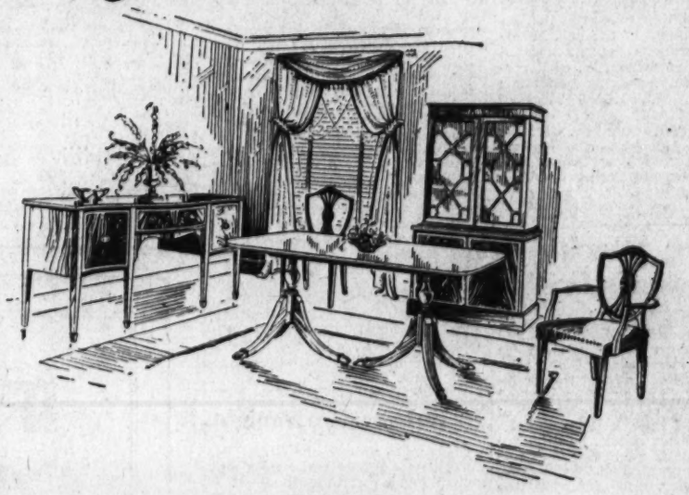
Lifetime FURNITURE


Getting What You Pay For . . .
IT'S an old saying, "You get only what you pay for," and it is just as true today as ever! When you are in need of some article of merchandise and see something of its kind advertised at a ridiculously low price, then is the time to say to yourself, "YOU GET ONLY WHAT YOU PAY FOR." People are not in business for their health. Business operates for profit. Without profit, business and progress are at a standstill. So, be on guard when you read of something at a price much lower than such an article of good quality should cost. The chances are you will get ONLY WHAT YOU PAY FOR if you buy it. This store sells Lifetime Furniture. We try, always, to give a dollar's worth for a dollar. That we have succeeded in doing this and satisfying the Washington public is exemplified in the fact that so many of our patrons are lifelong customers . . . so many keep coming back, bringing their friends and relatives, and by word of mouth admonish so many of their acquaintances that "MAYER & CO. IS THE PLACE TO BUY GOOD FURNITURE."

500 to Attend Meeting Today Of Educators

Prof. Hocking of Harvard Addresses College Group This Morning.

College presidents, deans and university officials, some 500 strong, will gather at the Hotel Mayflower today for the twenty-third annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges.

Nearly every State is due to be represented at the meeting, which has one central theme—"Contributions to Liberal Education in the College." Prof. William Ernest Hocking, of Howard University, will speak at the opening morning session on this theme from the standpoint of philosophy, and President Meta Glass of Sweet Briar College will speak for the humanities.

Activities of the year will be announced in annual reports by the president, James R. McCain of Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga.; Dr. Robert L. Kelly, executive secretary, and LeRoy E. Kimball, treasurer.

The general theme will be resumed this afternoon by Prof. Harry N. Holmes, of Oberlin College, Ohio, and Prof. A. J. Carlson, of the University of Chicago, speaking for the physical and biological sciences, respectively.

Conant to Make Address.

The annual dinner tonight in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower will feature addresses by Albert Mansbridge, president of the World Association for Adult Education and former member of the Royal Commission on the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and President James B. Conant of Harvard University. The visiting English educator is to discuss "The Colleges of Oxford and Cambridge," while President Conant will speak on "The American College."

Jonas Lie, artist and president of the National Academy of Design, will discuss "The Contribution of the Arts" at tomorrow morning's session. He will be followed by Prof. Charles H. Judd, of the University of Chicago, speaking on "The Education in Liberal Arts Colleges of Students Preparing to Teach in Public and Private Schools."

The Rhodes scholars in this country have been extended a special invitation to attend the round table luncheon tomorrow, which will be devoted to a general discussion of the English and American colleges, under the leadership of Dean Ernest S. Griffith, of American University.

Truck Driver Hurt In Hit-Run Crash

Andrew Caperones, 19, of 312 Third street northwest, was injured seriously yesterday when the truck he was driving was struck by a hit-and-run motorist in the 400 block New York avenue northwest.

Taken to Casualty Hospital, he was said to be suffering skull injuries and lacerations.

Police said the truck was struck from behind. Caperones was thrown against the front of the cab. Meanwhile, a coroner's jury exonerated Ohmar K. Henderson, 22, of Riverdale, Md., in the death of Dennis J. Toomey, 56, of 1326 Trinidad avenue northeast.

Toomey died Tuesday after he was struck at Fifteenth and H streets northeast New Year's Day. Witnesses testified the man walked against the side of Henderson's car.

Pergler Attacks America's Critics

European critics of America and its institutions were advised to mend their own ways by Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of National University Law School, in an address yesterday at a meeting of the University of Maryland's Public Relations Club.

Most of these critics, he said, are without adequate knowledge of this country, its people and its problems.

Dr. Pergler also defended the American judiciary, educational system and press.

'Abductor' of O'Connell Identified in New York

Catskill, N. Y., Jan. 13 (AP).—"Identification" by the State of a prisoner as one of the kidnapers of John J. O'Connell, jr., today overshadowed efforts to obtain a jury to retry Manning Strewl for the 1933 abduction.

District Attorney John T. Delaney said young O'Connell had "definitely identified" Frank Fischer, 53-year-old blacksmith, arrested yesterday, as "the man who walked me around and fed me." Delaney made the announcement as eight jurors were seated for the second trial of the one-time Albany beer runner.

Oberlin College Alumni Will Meet for Dinner

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Mayor "Tapped" at University of Maryland

Courtney Lankford, president of Sigma Circle of Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership fraternity, "taps" Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, for membership. The others are Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, and Dr. Frank Bomberger, president of the Baltimore Bank for Co-operatives, who also was tapped.

U. of Maryland Society Honors Mayor Jackson

Baltimore Official Made Member of Leader's Fraternity.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, who confessed he quit school against his father's advice at the age of 14, yesterday stressed advantages of a college education in an address before students of the University of Maryland attending the semi-annual "tapping" services of Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership fraternity.

Mayor Jackson, who was given honorary membership in the fraternity, added, however:

"A diploma is not a license for leadership in later years. It means a greater responsibility has been placed upon you. Your abilities individually naturally will be a determining factor in your success."

In introducing the mayor, H. C. Byrd, president of the university, said:

"I do not know what higher office might call Mayor Jackson, but I know that, whatever it is, it will be capably filled."

Jackson is regarded as a strong potential candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maryland.

In accepting membership in Omicron Delta Kappa, Jackson became a fraternity brother of Harry W. Nice, incumbent Republican Governor, who was initiated by the fraternity in 1935.

Frank B. Bomberger, president of the Baltimore Bank for Co-operatives and former member of the faculty at the University of Maryland, also became a member of the fraternity.

Students who were honored for their outstanding achievements in scholastic and extracurricular activities by election to membership in O. D. K., were Oscar Duley, Croome Station, Md., president of the Junior Class; Paul S. Wise, Dover, Del., editor of the 1937 year book, The Terrapin; John S. Hebb 3d, Baltimore, Md., editor of the yearbook for last year; Frank H. Cronin, Joppa, Md., Southern Conference champion quarter-miler; J. Dale Patterson, Indianhead, Md., president of the Interfraternity Council; John F. Kelly, Towson, Md., All-American lacrosse player; C. Harvey Cook, 2005 Kearney street northeast, manager of football, and Ernie D. Lundell, Chevy Chase, Md., manager of boxing.

Driver Who Began Kidnaping Scare Will Retain Job

William Jordan, colored chauffeur, who started a kidnap scare Tuesday night when he failed to take 6-year-old Jean Jacques Thomas home from school promptly, won't have to look for a new job after all.

Jordan, whose young charge is grandson of the secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Henry Lazard, "made the rounds" of drinking places with some bosom friends while Jean Jacques stayed in the automobile. Eventually he brought the boy home hours after school was out.

Lazard said he would not discharge Jordan, his chauffeur for 12 years, but that the colored man woud no longer call for Jean Jacques after school and that he must give up his "bad companions."

Morocco Port Is Found Free Of Nazi Troops

Associated Press Writer Sees No Foreign Soldiers in Region.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sidi-Bel-Abbes, Algeria, Jan. 13.—Melilla, seaport of Spanish Morocco, is placarded with posters reading "Long live Spain, Italy, Germany and Portugal," but an Associated Press correspondent who returned here today from that city found no foreign troops there.

Foreign engineers in the iron mines there asserted there were no German or Italian engineers in the mines. They agreed Melilla was free of German and Italian soldiers.

John M. S. Ince, British engineer, asserted the mines were completely free of German or Italian "influence." He denied French charges that the mineral wealth of Spanish Morocco had been turned over to foreigners, especially Nazis, for exploitation.

With Ince is associated an American, Alan Riley, of Bridgeport, Conn. Mrs. Riley is in Melilla with her husband.

The correspondent visited Melilla in response to the invitation of the Spanish insurgent high commissioner to foreign correspondents, except Russians, to come and see conditions in Spanish Morocco for themselves.

(The Spanish Fascists invited such inspection in an effort to refute French allegations that they were preparing to receive large numbers of Nazi troops in Morocco and that a Nazi infiltration already was in progress.)

The correspondent was in Melilla when a Spanish government seaplane bombed the town, killing three workmen on the docks. He returned to Algeria today to be free of the rigid censorship imposed in the Spanish zone.

Col. Sanchez Gonzalez, insurgent governor of Melilla, said the bombing was an attempt to hit an old fort used as an anti-aircraft defense center.

Col. Gonzalez said the only troops in Melilla were natives. Reports there were foreign troops in the city might be due, he said, to the fact that there now are eight infantry battalions and five cavalry squadrons in Melilla compared to three battalions altogether before the civil war.

Capitalists Testify At Moyers' Trial

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Two Atlanta capitalists today described how the former Georgia chairman of the American Liberty League forced his way into a downtown office at gunpoint and forced them to turn over $30,000 in cash.

Ernest Woodruff, one of the organizers of Coca-Cola, and T. K. Glenn, president of the Trust Company of Georgia, named William Moyers as the robber as the former Liberty League chairman went on trial in superior court.

In one of the most sensational cases in Atlanta history, Moyers, prominent Atlanta attorney, was arrested by G-Men on November 23—four days after he allegedly staged the robbery in Woodruff's offices.

U. S. Health Units Combine Urged

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—The American Medical Association suggested today consolidation of Federal health agencies in a single department under direction of a physician.

Taking cognizance of the projected reorganization of governmental activities, the association's board of trustees adopted a resolution setting forth in part:

"Recognizing the desirability that all activities of the Federal Government having to do with the promotion of health and the prevention of disease might with advantage be consolidated under one head and in one department, the board would recommend that such activities be so consolidated in a single department which would not, however, be subservient to any charitable, conservatory or other governmental interest."

Then spread a thick layer over the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. Follow these tested directions carefully. Each step of this "3-Minute VapoRub Massage" helps to lengthen and strengthen VapoRub's famous two-way action during the night.

Relieves a Cold Two Ways at Once—Almost before the VapoRub is well rubbed on, it starts to bring relief two ways at once—2 direct ways:

1. Through the Skin. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2. Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 18 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages of the nose, throat and chest.

This combined poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm and makes breathing easier—relieves irritation—eases the cough—helps break congestion. Long after you relax into comfortable sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Avoids Risk of Stomach Upsets—This safe external treatment cannot possibly upset the stomach, as constant internal "dosing" is so apt to do. It can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

Note: Any "cold" not promptly relieved by this thorough treatment with Vicks VapoRub should have the attention of a doctor.

Motor, Marine Strikes Studied At White House

Roosevelt, Miss Perkins Confer With McGrady in Special Session.

By William V. Nessly.

While President Roosevelt was conferring yesterday with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Assistant Secretary Edward F. McGrady, with the automobile and shipping strikes leading topics, Homer Martin, leader of the General Motors Corporation strikers, made arrangements here to be represented at a "peace" conference today in offices of Gov. Frank Murphy at Lansing, Mich.

Martin, who had been in the Capital discussing strike plans with John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, left for Detroit last night with John Brophy, C. I. O. director. After telephone conversations with aides at Detroit, Martin said there is "a steady growth of confidence all along the line" among the strikers. The night before Lewis had declared the strike would be "fought to a finish."

Martin also revealed he had turned over to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee a report on treatment said to have been given strikers who were arrested at Flint, Mich., following rioting there Monday night. Martin, who had denounced the disorder as "bloodletting," chargeable to General Motors, said Flint authorities had refused to let anyone see the arrested strikers.

The Civil Liberties Committee, headed by Senator Robert M. La Follette, is scheduled to resume hearings today of charges of anti-labor espionage and interference with workers' rights. It has announced that in the course of the hearings it will call General Motors officials.

There was no indication that President Roosevelt planned to alter his non-intervention policy in the strike so long as private negotiations have not completely broken down. There was hope here Gov. Murphy's conference today with representatives of the strikers and the company would be productive at least of further negotiations.

Both Miss Perkins and McGrady denied that they were planning to visit the strike scene, though McGrady commented that "you never can tell where I will go next."

Hearings Continue.

Meanwhile, the National Labor Relations Board continued its hearing on charges Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation has interfered with rights of its workers to select the labor organization of their choice. Steel is the second mass production industry which Lewis' C. I. O. is attempting to organize along industrial lines, and he is attacking the employe representation plan of Carnegie-Illinois Steel as a "company union."

William Garrity, an electrician at the company's Edgar Thomson plant, testified the company had refused to post on its bulletin board a pro-Roosevelt resolution adopted by employe representatives during the recent election campaign. Minutes of the representatives' meetings usually are posted, he said, but the superintendent made a distinction against those containing the Roosevelt indorsement on the ground that posting "political propaganda" was against policy of the company. Garrity said he is a Republican.

He said he had seen in the company offices many red, white and blue posters reading "Support Our Davy" when former Senator David Reed, of Pennsylvania, was running for re-election.

Memory Falters.

Though he had testified previously that use of the words "collective bargaining" instead of "industrial relations" had been denied him, he was unable yesterday to recall specific instances without referring to minutes of meetings.

Examination of Garrity was completed by introduction of exhibits dealing with opposition of the company and the steel industry to the Wagner-Connery labor relations bill as it was then before Congress.

The board then announced that the remainder of the hearing will be conducted by Trial Examiner Charles A. Wood, because the board will be occupied by other business.

Five Rail Unions To Ask Pay Boost

Chicago, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Five railroad brotherhoods, controlling labor operations of the Nation's trains, tonight agreed to demand a country-wide wage increase.

Drastic Slash Sought In House Membership

By the Associated Press.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), Wisconsin, proposed yesterday that the House membership be reduced from 435 to 96, the same as the Senate.

"The House is so unwieldy that there is confusion practically all of the time," he said. He added that 15 or 20 members "lead the others around by the nose."

Bicyclist Is Killed.

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—The impact from a collision between two bicycles discharged a .22-caliber rifle shell here today, killing one of the youthful riders, Vlyde Reese Stocks, 14, was mortally wounded when his bicycle crashed into another ridden by Jennings King, 15-year-old hunting companion.

Bishop Is Consecrated.

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 13 (AP).—The Rev. Dr. William Appleton Lawrence, of Providence, R. I., today was consecrated as bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Western Massachusetts by his father, Bishop William Lawrence (retired) of the Diocese of Massachusetts.

a 5-cent hourly wage increase and reduction of hours.

An attempt to launch a legislative investigation into the strikes was sidetracked when a House resolution providing for a committee to hold hearings, inspect plants and examine workers, failed to gain enough support for suspension of rules, and was referred to a committee.

The total out of work in General Motors automotive plants passed 114,000 as the Pontiac Motor Car Co. at Pontiac, Mich., and the Oldsmobile division at Lansing closed their assembly lines. Fisher Body plants supplying these lines shut down yesterday for lack of glass.

At Bay City and Flint, Mich., and at Anderson, Ind., anti-strike organizations were active.

Homer P. Lambert, president of the Citizens' League for Employment Security at Anderson, where 10,000 General Motors employes are idle, said his group would ask Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana to act "if Indiana is invaded by strikers from Ohio, Michigan and other States." He claimed approximately 9,500 of the corporation's workers in Anderson wish to return to their jobs.

Alliances "for the security of our jobs, our homes and our community" were active at Bay City and Flint. The Bay City Alliance invited unemployed workers of a closed Chevrolet parts plant to attend mass meetings.

Strikers Seek Conference.

San Francisco, Jan. 13 (AP).—Waterfront peacemakers speeded up their efforts again today in the face of growing belief the Government would intervene unless the maritime strike is settled soon. Three unions sought immediate meetings with the shipowners.

Holding Company Conforms to Act

By the Associated Press.

Another holding company capitulated yesterday and told the Securities Commission it would register under the holding company act.

The act provides for regulation of utility holding companies. Registration is required as the first step toward regulation.

The company which gave notice of registration is the American Utilities Service Corporation, of Savannah, Ill., with assets of about $15,000,000 and subsidiaries in 18 States. Previously it had obtained an injunction preventing the commission from enforcing the act against it.

Perry Crawford, president, in filing the notification, told the commission that registration was "essential" in connection with proposed changes in his company's capitalization. Under the act, an unregistered holding company cannot sell securities in interstate commerce.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce's Inheritance Is Dubious

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—The sleigh ride which killed Vivian Jackson, young British scientist and gentleman-jockey, appeared today to have cost his fiancee, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, any share of his sizable fortune.

Solicitors for Mrs. Jackson, who had brought suit for divorce prior to the St. Moritz accident in which her husband was killed, said they believed Jackson had left no will. If none is found, half the estate would go to Mrs. Jackson and half to her child.

U. S. Agents Question Suspect Seized in Mattson Boy Killing

terror was seen in the fact he kept the slight, 70-pound boy bound tightly by the wrists during his captivity. The manner in which he killed the boy also indicates sudden terror, officers believed.

They pointed out the man had taken the long chance of moving the dead body in his automobile, after he had once hidden it, as an indication of his fear.

A long-bladed knife became a chief objective of the search when reliable sources revealed it was considered one of the most important potential pieces of evidence.

Autopsy physicians found a narrow stab wound in the back. Though the wound apparently was not the cause of death, officials were said to consider the knife a possible source of fingerprints which might lead them to the kidnap-murderer.

The autopsy was said to have disclosed Charles was brutally beaten several times before being slain, was probably underfed during the entire time of his captivity and was mistreated. The source refused to say definitely he was the victim of a pervert.

Deep Stab Wound.

The informants asserted the stab wound had apparently been made by a long carving knife, a stiletto or a large penknife. The wound was deep but did not penetrate vital organs.

Today's sudden activity of the hunt developed while private funeral services were being held for the victim and the battered body put away in a mausoleum.

A Presbyterian minister conducted a 25-minute funeral service as Dr. and Mrs. Mattson, the boy's brother and sister and some 200 family friends watched silently in a mortuary.

There were no tears. Mrs. Mattson, the bereaved mother, walked calmly to the casket with her husband after the service was concluded. For five minutes they stood looking down. Then close friends of the family lifted the boy's bier and carried it to a waiting hearse.

The parents' faces, worn by the 15 days of uncertainty while their son was in a kidnaper's hands and the shock of his ghastly death, were composed, almost calm.

Brother, Sister Calm.

William Mattson, 16, and his sister, Muriel, 14, who last saw their brother struggling in the hands of his abductor December 27, showed similar self-control.

Behind the intense manhunt tonight lay numerous "clews," showing the Department of Justice was placing no geographical limit on its search.

Reports of suspicious looking characters, mysterious automobiles and persons supposedly resembling the abductor appeared in Texas, Missouri and elsewhere in Washington State as in California.

New York Boy Missing.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Jan. 13 (AP).—A cryptic note, branded by authorities as part of an extortion scheme, was received today by the father of 16-year-old Robert Young, of New Rochelle, N. Y., missing for the past ten days.

The father, Robert J. Young, former New Rochelle public works commissioner, immediately after receiving the note inserted a want ad in the Mount Vernon Daily Argus, which read:

"Jim Crow: Will keep appointment. Mary Ann."

Young refused to divulge the contents of the letter, but authorities scouted the possibility that Robert had been kidnaped. Police expressed the belief the father was being made the victim of a hoax or an extortion plot. On Sunday, the father inserted public notices in New York newspapers asking his son to come home. Authorities believed that extortioners had taken advantage of the advertisements.

'Insider' Stock Rule Assailed by Senator

By the United Press.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, last night cited control of American corporations by a group of "insiders" owning only 21 per cent of stock as proof of need for passage of his Federal incorporation bill.

Taking his figures from an SEC report O'Mahoney charged in a radio address the money of the stockholders who own the remaining 79 per cent of the total shares is being used as "the tail to the insiders' kite."

en route to India, served in the famous Black Watch Regiment during the World War. He has been decorated by the government with the Order of the British Empire and the Military Cross.

Background of Case.

Mrs. Simpson's divorce suit was uncontested. She charged infidelity, won the decree nisi (probationary) after a brief appearance at Ipswich Courthouse before Justice Sir John Anthony Hawke.

Edward of England, announcing through Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin his desire to marry Mrs. Simpson, abdicated his throne after the British government indicated it would not accept Mrs. Simpson either as Queen or morganatic wife of the monarch.

Mrs. Simpson is at Cannes, France, waiting for her decree to become final in April. Edward, now Duke of Windsor, is in Austria, a guest at the chateau of Baron Rothschild.

Strikers Protest Girding of Police

The Joint Maritime Strike Council of New York yesterday telegraphed a protest to President Roosevelt against the "preparations" of Capitol police for a mass march by the strikers on Washington, it was reported by the Associated Press.

Signed by Jack Lawrenson, secretary to the strike council, who stated between 500 and 1,000 strikers would leave Manhattan at midnight to "descend" on the District by trucks, buses and hitch-hike rides, the telegram said:

"We learn from The Washington Post that police of the District have announced they have 'tear gas and other armaments to prevent disorders.' We vigorously protest the implication and possible consequences of such a statement.

"Our delegates are orderly American citizens, coming to lay legitimate grievances before their representatives. We ask you to instruct police that no tear gas or armament be carried. Await your immediate reply."

Ousted Judge to Appeal.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—An appeal of Halsted L. Ritter, former Federal district judge, from the court of claims decision upholding his impeachment and ouster by the Senate, will be filed with the United States Supreme Court Monday.

California Club Sponsors Ball For Inaugural

More Than 2,000 Guests Expected at Banquet Next Wednesday.

Observing the second Inauguration of President Roosevelt, the California Democratic Club of Washington, will sponsor a victory banquet and ball at the Mayflower Hotel next Wednesday.

Moving ahead with the entire Capital in planning for the ceremonies, officials of the organization explained that the celebration is in line with the Inaugural committee's policy of encouraging State organizations to hold banquets and balls on the night of the Inauguration, commemorating the largest Democratic plurality in history.

More than 2,000 invited guests, including Cabinet members, Congressmen and their wives and motion-picture stars from Hollywood, are expected to attend the affair.

Those serving on the Victory Banquet and Ball Committee include Florence D. Shreve, president; Keith Carlin, chairman of the arrangements committee, and W. O. R. Manning, chairman of the finance committee.

Carillo Is M. C.

Meanwhile, it was learned yesterday that among famous military units which will participate in the Inaugural parade will be the Thirty-fourth Infantry, First Medical Regiment and the first battalion of the Sixteenth Field Artillery.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, general chairman of arrangements, asserted that the Thirty-fourth, now stationed at Fort Meade, Md., will be organized into three battalions for the parade.

He also announced that 238 persons have subscribed to the Inaugural guarantee fund, and the drive for $100,000 virtually was completed.

Fat Girls Get The Go-By—Slim Girls Win Men

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers". If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

Parent-Teachers Group Maps Film Course for High Schools

'Appreciation of Movies' Would Be Aim of Proposal Studied by Executive Committee of National Body Meeting Here.

Classes in appreciation of the movies will be offered high school youth of the Nation if a campaign mapped here yesterday by officers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers works out.

Meeting as an executive committee at national headquarters, 1201 Sixteenth street northwest, the P.-T. A. leaders urged motion picture courses as a part of their efforts to extend visual education.

"The aim of such courses," said Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, of Winnetka, Ill., president of the national organization, "shall be the development in youth of adequate standards for evaluating the social and artistic qualities of theatrical films."

Mrs. Langworthy said her group also was interested in improving the type of motion picture brought to community theaters, and that an effort would be made to get legislation enabling communities to choose films without "the restrictive influences of certain motion picture trade practices, notably that of block-booking and blind-buying."

Visual education is to be one of the major activities promoted this year by the 2,000,000 P.-T. A. members in the United States.

The organization will be interested not only in commercial motion pictures, but in the establishment and promotion of national, State, regional, city and county film libraries. State film chairmen in those States not having film libraries will be asked to work with board members, educators, and public-spirited citizens to organize such libraries.

"Educational films deserve much wider use in the schools than they have yet received," said Mrs. Langworthy.

The P.-T. A. also will seek cooperation of the American Council on Education in the establishment of an American Film Institute. Dr. Edgar Dale, of Ohio State University, has been named director of the visual education program.

The executive committee meeting will continue through Saturday.

Present at the session, in addition to Mrs. Langworthy, were Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, Lansing, Mich.; Mrs. Hamilton Shaffer, Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Raymond Binford, Guilford College, N. C.; Mrs. Simon S. Lapham, Providence, R. I.; Mrs. A. S. Shuttleworth, Denver, Colo.; Mrs. C. H. Thorpe, Little Rock, Ark.; Mrs. M. P. Summers, Sioux City, Iowa, and Mrs. Hugh Bradford, Sacramento, Calif.

76 Americans To Be Warned On Spanish Aid

Loss of Citizenship, Fines Is State Department Threat to Group.

Seventy-six Americans who marched through Barcelona on their way to the Spanish front, will be threatened today by the State Department with possible loss of their citizenship, heavy fines and imprisonment.

American Consul General Mahlon Fay Perkins, Barcelona, reported to the department yesterday that the 76 volunteers from the United States had recently passed through the Catalan seaport.

Acting Secretary of State R. Walton Moore last night sent the following cable to Perkins:

"We have had until now no information that Americans in any considerable number were taking part in the present civil strife in Spain. In the circumstances you may deem it advisable to bring the provisions of Section 5282, Revised Statutes of the United States, and Section 2 of the Act of March 2, 1907, to the attention of such Americans as you may have reason to believe are contemplating entering the military service of either the Spanish government or of the Spanish insurgents.

Inconsistent With Neutrality.

"You may point out to these persons also that the enlistment of American citizens in either of the opposing forces in Spain is unpatriotically inconsistent with the American Government's policy of the most scrupulous non-intervention in Spanish internal affairs."

The first of the laws quoted imposes a fine of $2,000 and a sentence of three years in prison to men in foreign service as commissioned officers; and a $1,000 fine and three years imprisonment for enlisted men. The second states:

"That any American citizen shall be deemed to have expatriated himself when he has been naturalized in any foreign state in conformity with its laws, or when he has taken an oath of allegiance to any foreign state."

Speculation Is Aroused.

As Acting Secretary Moore noted, the cable from Perkins was the first notice the State Department had that any considerable organized number of Americans had enlisted in the Spanish conflict. Immediate speculation was aroused on the extent of such enlistments from this country. It was believed the United Spainish Aid Societies in New York was the only place where any accurate record has been kept, and that organization has not chosen as yet to release any figures, it was said.

Even as the Acting Secretary continued his efforts to avoid foreign entanglements with their dangers of war, Secretary of State Cordell Hull arrived in New York, on his way home to Washington from the successful conclusion of the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace.

Meeting of Importance.

According to an Associated Press dispatch, Secretary Hull said the American republics have served notice they will work side by side to "prevent war from endangering the peace of our own continent."

Mrs. Hull and 28 members of the party accompanied the smiling white-haired Secretary home. Hull's brief statement said:

"While the conference met at Buenos Aires, each and every delegation was conscious of the anxious difficulties faced by Europe. We return hopeful that the effort we have made will strengthen the hands of those who are struggling to preserve peace there and elsewhere.

"The South American meeting was one of the most important ever held in this hemisphere.

"Its first and greatest achievement was the unanimous agreement to create a peace system taking in every republic of the American continent. It set up a machinery for making that organization effective in the form of an arrangement for mutual consultation. We have served notice that we will work out means of acting together to prevent war from endangering the peace of our own continent.

Primarily, the object of this understanding is to prevent war from arising between nations of this hemisphere. All the American governments also agreed that the same machinery should be used in the event of a war abroad which might endanger the maintenance of peace in the Western world."

Secretary Hull will be back at his desk today.

were brought to hospitals here many hours after receiving first-aid treatment in a summer ranger lookout station 100 yards up the slope from where the big plane struck.

Johnson died shortly after dawn. In a room nearby Mrs. Johnson slept, her injuries described as mild cerebral concussions, a fractured knee, and shock from the accident and delay in hospitalization.

Crashes in Mexico.

Mexico City, Jan. 13 (AP).—A report of the third Mexican airplane disaster this week reached here tonight with indications 11 persons had perished in the crashes.

While six airplanes sought an air liner lost in Vera Cruz State with nine aboard, Maj. Adan Galvez Perez, a resident of the capital, said he received telegraphic advices from San Critobal las Casas that two persons were killed and two injured in a crack-up there.

He also said he had word from Villa Hermosa, Tabasco, that a third plane carrying two physicians and a pilot had crashed. The pilot, Roberto Navarro, was said to have been badly hurt, but there was no report of the fate of the doctors.

Children Lose Hero.

Chanute, Kans., Jan. 13 (AP).—The children of Chanute lost their hometown hero today.

Playground clamor was stilled by news of the air-crash death of Martin Johnson, African explorer.

Johnson left home when he was 14, shipped to England on a cattle boat, tramped over Europe and returned to the United States a stowaway. Six years later he left his father's jewelry store in Chanute to become cook on Jack London's voyage of the Snark—a three-year tour of the South Seas Islands.

From that time on his restless nature kept him on the move, voyaging to far places to photograph and write of strange lives.

'More Drastic' Air Regulation Drafted by U.S.

Better Weather Reports Chief Aim; Plane Toll Reaches 69.

By the United Press.

The Federal Government advanced four proposals last night which aviation experts believe will make air lines safer. The action came as the death of Martin Johnson raised the toll of the past year's air transport accidents to 69.

Developments during the day included:

1. Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson announced "more drastic" regulations had been drafted and will be distributed today to air line operators for consideration and suggestions.

100 New Weather Stations.

2. The Weather Bureau announced that starting Friday 100 new off-the-airway stations will start making six-hourly observations. These data will make for more accurate forecasts on which pilots decide whether to take-off or "ground" their plane.

3. Chairman Royal S. Copeland of the Senate Commerce Committee revealed his air safety subcommittee will recommend expenditure of $10,000,000 to improve weather reporting facilities along air lines.

4. Bureau of Air Commerce officials continued plans for an air safety conference here within the next month to go over the entire question of airplane safety.

Johnson explained the new regulations were not a hasty result of Tuesday's crash near Newhall, Calif., in which two persons were killed. He said the department had been studying the situation for many months.

Redrafting Expected.

He explained that after the operators return the regulations with suggestions on how to make them more practical, they will be redrafted and officially promulgated by the Bureau of Air Commerce.

The Assistant Secretary said recently that he believed that improvements "we already have in mind" would eliminate "at least 75 per cent of the type of accidents we have experienced in the past."

The Weather Bureau, frequently criticized as giving pilots insufficient information on storms and other weather data, announced a denser network of weather observation stations will give better synchronized and more detailed and frequent forecasts for fliers.

Masons to Install.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Jan. 13.—E. G. Reese and A. H. Spielman will be installed as worshipful masters of the Hagerstown and Friendship Lodges of Masons, respectively, at joint installation exercises to be held Friday night here. The officers will be installed by John R. Tenney, district grand lecturer.

U. S. Official Served 25 Years on F. T. C.; Rites to Be Held Today.

Thomas Walker Page, of Virginia, perhaps the most respected tariff economist of modern times, died yesterday in the hospital of the University of Virginia, one of the many schools from which he held degrees, at the age of 70.

Funeral services will be held today at 2:30 at the historic Grace Episcopal Church at Cobham, Va., near which the family's beautiful estate has lain for many generations. There are buried his brother and three sisters, all of whom died during the past two years.

Dr. Page was vice chairman of the Federal Tariff Commission and chairman of the President's reciprocity committee. He had been associated with tariff regulation since 1912 when Taft appointed him to the Tariff Board. Wilson appointed him to the first Tariff Commission in 1918. Hoover reappointed him in 1930, and Roosevelt again for a term to run to 1941.

O'Brien Pays Tribute.

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, chairman of the commission, said last night:

"He was the ideal tariff commissioner. In the performance of his duties he knew neither politics nor sections nor interests. The accurate ascertainment of information and their commonsense interpretation were the ends toward which he aimed."

Dr. Page, whose brother was for many years the revered James Morris Page, dean of the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, is survived by his wife and three children, Thomas W. Page 3d, of Anaconda, Mont.; Miss Rose Walker Page, and Mrs. Stephen Upson, of Washington. The family home for some years has been at the Shoreham Hotel. Stephen L. Upson is with the Securities and Exchange Commission here.

Mr. Page's interest in the economics of tariffs began many years ago with his graduation from Randolph Macon College in 1888. His studies carried him through three years at the University of Virginia, from which he graduated in 1889, and then on to the University of Leipzig which conferred upon him the degree of doctor of philosophy, and thence to the Oxford University and still later to Paris.

Intellectually Honest.

He was essentially a college man and his original field of work was that of a college instructor. James Burton Reynolds, of Washington, who served with him on the Tariff Board, a Republican, as Mr. Page was a Democrat, not long ago said of him:

"Of all the men who entered public life by the college professorial route, he was the most conscious in having his feet solidly on the ground. Of men from all walks of life I never knew one of greater intellectual honesty."

He was born at Cobham, Va., near Charlottesville, December 4, 1866, on a beautiful estate in the rolling Blue Ridge foothills country. Within recent years three of Mr. Page's sisters, who resided here, died, and the old estate passed into the hands of Carroll Todd, attorney.

Author of many books, monographs, public documents and articles on commerce, taxation, and tariff, Dr. Page has served on innumerable boards, special commissions, and conferences. For two years he was a member of the editorial board of the American Economic Review. For years he was associated with the Brookings Institution. He served on many war commissions during 1917-18. "Making the Tariff in the United States" was one his best-known works.

Dr. Harold Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, in a brief expression upon the death of his former colleague, said last night:

"Dr. Page was trained in Germany and thus obtained in addition to his study of American economic problems the advantages of the point of view and philosophy of the great German thinkers—that is, he was realistic.

"Page always had the realistic and practical emphasis in his scholastic work and his work with reference to the problem of scientific tariff making was of outstanding importance. He was also a very close student of taxation and taxation reform.

"His loss is a very real loss to the economics profession as well as to the Government."

Mr. Page's academic career as an instructor and professor is almost as wide as his scholastic work. He was dean of the College of Commerce at the University of California; head of the department of economics at the University of Texas; professor of history and economics at the University of California; and for 16 years a professor of economics at the University of Virginia.

Scholar And Public Servant.

Thomas Walker Page, vice chairman of the Tariff Commission, who died yesterday at Charlottesville, combined an academic career of outstanding distinction with an equally notable contribution as a public servant. Indeed, these two phases of his life work supplemented each other in almost ideal fashion.

He was a man of broad culture, luminous intellectual quality, rare personal charm and complete reliability. These qualities endeared him to successive generations of students at the universities of California, Texas and Virginia, with which institutions he was associated at one time or another. These qualities were equally valuable when, almost as a matter of course, he transferred his activities as an authority on taxation from the academic sphere to that of public affairs.

A member of the old Tariff Board appointed by President Taft, he was one of the first men to be appointed by President Wilson to the first Tariff Commission, later serving as chairman of that body. From 1923 to 1930 he was with the Brookings Institution. But in the latter year, at President Hoover's insistence, he rejoined the commission. On the expiration of his first term he was reappointed by President Roosevelt. Thus Dr. Page saw service under four Presidents, two of them Republicans, two Democrats.

If, as a result of the civil service reorganization now being urged by the Brownlow committee, more men of the caliber of Dr. Page in future enter public service, the labors of that committee will be abundantly justified. Never more than now is his type needed—a scholar who has his feet on the ground, a public servant who is moved by no narrow partisan interests but by the welfare of the Nation as a whole.

Statistical Jeremiad.

A West Virginia statistician has estimated the cost of the depression on the basis of the decline in the national birth rate. From 1932 to 1936, according to his calculations, 1,000,000 American babies missed being born. Had the wolves not so frightened the stork, 730,000 of these infants would be growing to maturity. With the lifetime earnings of the average American reckoned at $38,000, an economic loss of more than $27,000,000,000 can be seen.

For all their zeros, the figures are unimpressive. They would scarcely have been mentioned at all had it not been for one further breakdown made by the compiler. It develops that with the loss of 730,000 potential workers (with the emphasis on "potential" in view of the current relief roll totals) the country has been deprived of 12,000 railroad men, 8,000 school teachers, 1,300 doctors, 116 millionaires, 15 ornithologists, 2 deep-sea divers and 1 lion tamer.

Possibly, even, the country has been spared three or four statisticians, if that occupation can be regarded as a profession rather than a disease.

The Sanjak Dispute.

The French are discovering, in the case of Syria, that the retreat from imperialism can be as full of pitfalls as was the advance.

Not long ago France signed a treaty with Syria guaranteeing that country its independence in three years. But this act has only piled new difficulties on French shoulders. For the Syrians are annoyed over the fact that Lebanon, which has a Christian majority in contrast to the overwhelming Moslem majority in the rest of the present French mandate, was excluded from the Syrian union. On the other hand, the Turks are up in arms because Alexandretta and Antioch, largely populated by Turkish-speaking Moslems, are to be included in the new Syrian republic.

The Turkish government has demanded that the Sanjak of Alexandretta, which includes both places, be vouchsafed a special administrative regime divorced from Syria. This France has refused on the ground that to do so would mean the creation of a dangerous center of international intrigue in the Near East. Moreover, the French point out, the Sanjak problem can no longer be regarded as purely a Franco-Turkish affair. In view of the Franco-Syrian treaty, Syria also has a stake in it.

Recently the whole problem was laid at the door of the League of Nations. A decision was expected to be reached by the time of the next Council meeting late this month. However, the Turks have let it be known that they will not consent to any settlement, even one reached by the League, if the rights of the Turkish-speaking inhabitants of the Sanjak are not safeguarded. There has even been, in some Turkish quarters, talk of strong pressure against France.

This talk is no doubt to be discounted as the ebullience of a young nation conscious of its nationalism and eager to show its newfound power. Only a little while ago the Ghazi, Kamal Ataturk, won great acclaim by seeking and securing revision of the Lausanne treaty by peaceful means. To be sure, Franco-Turkish tensions have been rising as a result of the failure of the two nations to reach an agreement concerning the Sanjak. Yet the fact that at the request of the Paris and Ankara governments the Council has been asked to postpone consideration of the problem shows that neither side has ruled out a satisfactory settlement through direct diplomatic negotiations.

Not Independent By Accident.

The objectivity and balance generally characteristic of the Brownlow committee's report throws into high relief the doctrinaire and superficial character of its discussion of the shortcomings of the independent regulatory commissions.

The committee's description of these independent bodies as a "headless fourth branch of government" and a "haphazard deposit of irresponsible agencies and uncoordinated powers" does serious violence to the facts. For the inference is that Congress had no definite purpose in emancipating Federal regulatory commissions from executive control. Such an assumption is in many cases utterly untenable.

The record contains ample evidence that Congress intended to protect agencies charged with the regulation of railroads, interstate commerce, and other important economic and commercial activities against political pressure emanating from the regular executive departments of Government. Only recently, in the Humphreys case, the President's power of removal of a member of the Federal Trade Commission was held to be limited to removal for specific causes enumerated in the Federal Trade Commission act.

As the Supreme Court then pointed out, the power of removal claimed by Mr. Roosevelt had a coercive influence threatening the independence of the commission. That commission, moreover, "is not only wholly disconnected from the executive department." It "was created by Congress as a means of carrying into operation legislative and judicial powers, and as an agency of the legislative and judicial departments."

The Supreme Court in this case clearly emphasized the functions of the FTC as primarily a legislative and judicial agency which needs to be safeguarded against executive interference. So it would seem that either ignorance or prejudice must explain the way the Committee on Administrative Management ignores the legislative aspect of commission activities, distinguishing only between their administrative or executive functions on the one hand and their judicial functions on the other.

There is no doubt that serious abuses have arisen through permitting the same regulatory agency to act as judge and prosecutor. The problems resulting from this unfortunate combination of functions have lately been most helpfully discussed by the special committee on administrative law of the American Bar Association. That body recommends the creation of a Federal administrative court to provide a means for gradually segregating judicial functions now exercised by Federal administrative agencies.

The Brownlow committee, however, tentatively suggests that every independent commission should be divided into an administrative and judicial section. The former would be placed under a bureau or division chief within one of the regular executive departments. The latter would remain under the control of a commission whose members, appointed for long terms would be independent of any department except for purposes of "administrative housekeeping."

It is impossible even to summarize all the doubts and objections that arise in connection with a cut-and-dried proposal of this sort. Certainly, it would be extremely difficult to effect a segregation of functions by statute while preserving the adaptability so essential to efficient regulatory performance. Moreover, the committee itself points out that a separation of functions is in most cases becoming the rule without legal coercion. Therefore, the chief purpose of the proposed reorganization would seem to be an undesirable extension of executive power over policy-making legislative activities.

The Brownlow committee errs profoundly in assuming that its plan would be more consonant with that constitutional division of powers which concentrates executive authority in the hands of the President. Rather, its proposal would illegally bestow upon the President the tremendous powers of administrative law-making which Congress has delegated to independent boards and agencies. That delegation comes from Congressional inability to give attention to the detailed rules and regulations required to cope with the complicated economic society of the present day. But this is no argument for vesting those essentially legislative powers in the Executive.

The independent regulatory agencies have sometimes failed to function efficiently and have at other times abused their powers. Reforms are needed to correct these defects. But it decidedly does not follow that the remedy lies in stripping them of their independence and bringing them directly under the dictatorial dominance of an over-ambitious Executive.

A Real Career Service.

All friends of the merit system will be greatly encouraged by the general program of reform which the Committee on Administrative Management has outlined for the civil service. The proposals of this committee offer a stimulating and comprehensive plan for overdue improvement in the Government's personnel system. And the indorsement of the President gives promise that at last planning in this field will be followed by action.

Virtually every important demand of the civil service reformers has been approved by the reorganization committee. Congress is asked to extend the merit system "upward, outward and downward" to all except the "relatively few" Government employes who are in policy-determining posts. But beyond this, recommendation is made for a real career service, with compensation adequate to responsibilities. The only point of dissent here is the failure to include "the chief diplomatic posts" among those to be filled on demonstrated professional merit.

For the moment attention may well be concentrated upon the proposed Civil Service Administration, designed to take the place of the present Civil Service Commission. Experience sustains the committee's indictment of the bi-partisan boards—so far as administrative activities are concerned. Too often they work at cross-purposes. At best they represent a rather ineffective effort to remove a particular field of governmental activity from partisan control. Wherever they can be replaced by more unified organizations that are at the same time insulated from politics, there should be no hesitation in making the change.

In departing from the existing policy, however, every precaution must be taken to avoid exposure of the new personnel system to partisan control. That this necessity is clearly recognized by the committee is shown by the insistence that the administrator must be a highly competent executive experienced in personnel matters, and that his appointment must be on the basis of an open, competitive and impartially conducted examination.

A somewhat disturbing point in the committee's proposal is that the civil service administrator would be subject to removal by the President at any time. One of the strongest arguments of the committee against the present system is that the commissioners "remain in office for relatively short periods and rarely acquire the degree of expertness necessary to executive direction." That argument seems to be even more applicable to a single administrator who would be subject to dismissal whenever he might incur the displeasure of the President.

To give the administrator the prestige and security of tenure he would need as head of a gigantic career service, appointment for a long term seems desirable. Or if the length of term is to be left indefinite, he should be removable only for cause. Probably a somewhat longer tenure of office would also be advisable for members of the very important advisory board designed to become the "watchdog of the merit system." If their terms were made ten rather than seven years the insurance against partisan influences would be even stronger.

Such criticisms, however, overlook the importance of the recommendations in seeking to cut the patronage evil at its root. This the civil service section of the report is clearly designed to accomplish. The possibility of further relatively minor improvements must not be allowed to obscure the tremendous significance of the proposals actually made.

The Widow's Might.

It would be stretching a point to say that St. Catherine of Alexandria was the first lovelorn editor. But certainly she was the one to whom 40 virgins went for advice on the subject of remaining single.

Because of this, or in spite of it, the lovelorn editor is still generally assumed to be a woman. Moreover, sentimentalists like to believe that only in this advanced age of equal rights does woman so forget her modesty as to put her love problems into print. It remained for a WPA worker in South Carolina to upset both these traditions. He has unearthed what is probably the first wholesale petition of lonely hearts. It was written in 1734 when men were men and women supposedly silent. And it was addressed to a man—King George II of England.

This document was published in the South Carolina Gazette of March 2, 1734. "Whereas," it stated, "we the humble petitioners are at present in a very melancholy disposition of mind, considering how all the bachelors are blindly captivated by widows, and our more youthful charmers thereby neglected." And it begged His Majesty to order "That no widow shall presume to marry any young man till the maids are all provided for." It was signed by 15 eligible but disconsolate female colonists.

It is doubtful if history records the outcome of this sad protest of two centuries ago. But there is little doubt that under the circumstances King George II found it much easier to answer than would King George VI if a similar petition were put to him. The widow's might has been only too recently demonstrated in England.

Letters to the Editor

Modern Needs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The other day a Brooklyn minister spectacularly burned his Bible in the pulpit because his dwindling audience chagrined him. Which would be something like a restaurateur peevishly destroying his foodstuffs because his patrons no longer enjoyed them.

Ministers seem puzzled these days, but to catch fish one has to select the bait. And to catch human beings one must appeal to them through either love or fear. Some religions have flourished surprisingly on the latter. But we are in changing times. Love, served to meet the modern needs, is what we want. We want it preached as it applies in a literal way to courage, to faith, to neighborliness; as it applies to advancing science; as it applies to immortality. And speaking of immortality, the church is the loudest to proclaim it and the most backward of all groups to acknowledge the possibility of any plausible proof of it!

The church should be inspiring science, not having to have science drag it along. When the modern church takes a lesson in salesmanship it won't be necessary to burn any more Bibles. You can never change the law that people want good, according to their highest conception of it, and they're going where they think they can find it. When people can come away from a service comforted, inspired and uplifted according to their present-day needs they won't have to be dragged back to the next one.

Taxes On Labor.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: A flash from Rome stating that Mussolini was sending a fleet of airplanes to bomb our eastern seaports and principal inland cities would create the greatest alarm and resentment. Nevertheless damage is at the present time being inflicted upon these same cities to the extent of possibly ten million dollars daily not by foreign enemies but by union labor strikes.

Wages are fixed not by employers but by the inexorable law of supply and demand. With millions of unemployed the natural tendency of wages is downward, not upward, and the numerous strikes at various industrial centers are unjustifiable attempts of but a fraction of American workers to secure by military methods an unfair advantage over those who are not organized. And the Government at Washington encourages these attempts.

All wages and salaries should be far greater than those which now prevail; and there is a legitimate way to secure these advances without the use of force, military coercion, or other unjustifiable means. In order to produce more jobs than there are workers, thereby raising wages and salaries, all we have to do is to abolish all taxes, including tariff duties, which now fall so heavily upon labor and the products of labor. This is the method of sanity and justice.

The Parade Again.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with real interest and approval that I read of the protest of the pastors of the Federation of Christian Churches against the wholly military aspect of the coming inaugural parade:

As our President is also Commander in Chief of the Army, it is quite fitting that he should be escorted by representatives of each branch of the service on his march from the Capitol to the White House. But it would also seem fitting to allow the people of our country to be represented, as in past years, in this great parade. I cannot help but feel real disappointment and some concern over the establishment of a military precedent, such as is outlined by the committee in charge. There are many others who share this sentiment. DOROTHY D. MARSH.

Threat Of Fascism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler's column, "If It Had Happened Here," should be placed in the hands of every Congressman who is capable of reading something besides the Congressional Record. Mr. Pegler implies that democracy is not an abstract word used over the radio by rabid patrioteers whose heart and brain are in their bank accounts. Perhaps too late we may realize from the above column that when Spain falls into the hands of the Fascist brigands, so will France fall—and later America.

Our vaunted "free press" has been lavish in participating verbally in the Spanish fight on the side of the Fascists. Many accounts from Spain have been deliberately distorted in order to disguise the real nature of the struggle and the invading foreign troops. Germany and Italy have been aiding Gen. Franco since August at least; and the first and worst outrage of the present incipient World War was the massacre of loyalist troops by Franco's imported Moors at Badajos, when the Spanish people fighting for liberty and democracy were herded into a bullring and mowed down by machine-gun fire, not from Spaniards, but from hired foreign mercenaries.

Also, we are told that the Fascists fight to restore the church, when we know that the Basque Nationalists, devout Roman Catholics, are fighting on the side of the loyalist government, and the Spanish government is not, as many papers insist, a Socialist or "Red" government, but a duly elected government similar to the present one in the United States.

America will yet regret the false accounts of the struggle printed by the newspapers, and the hypocritical "neutrality" stand taken by this Nation—an act that withholds aid to the loyalists and allows Germany and Italy to purchase military supplies in America to be used against a democratic people fighting to retain their democracy against Fascist aggression. Pegler is right—tomorrow we shall reap our victory without honor—for Fascist troops may march here to force us to accept a Fascist America.

Inaugural Parade Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Now that preparations for the inaugural parade are in full swing, and it is more or less definitely known as to what contingents, military or civic, are to be admitted into the procession, under direction of Admiral Grayson and his appointed committees, it may not be amiss to call public attention to the CCC camps in and around Washington which should be included.

The CCC being a creation of President Roosevelt and generally conceded to be a successful enterprise well worthy of the Government efforts, the boys should be singularly favored, and we should think, more particularly, those of the immediate vicinity.

I happened to talk over the matter with some of the administrative personnel in local CCC camps, and I am informed that at least eight units from within an area of about 30 miles around Washington could be conveniently mustered into the inaugural parade, with no cost to the committee in charge, and no need for housing facilities. Transportation could be easily furnished by CCC army trucks taking the men into the city and back to their camps on the same day under the proper supervision of their commanding officers. J. T. L.

Washington, Jan. 9.

The Maxwell Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A correspondent, P. A., has made some attempt to illumine the Maxwell case for us, but while he says it is very clear to him he has certainly not made it clear to the rest of us or, shall we say, a different psychology.

"She had no legal right to hit her father," ignoring the fact that no parent has a legal right to punish a child who is over age. He forgets, or is ignorant of the fact, that in what are considered the more enlightened social groups no man may lay hand on his daughter after she has reached the state of womanhood: that is, no gentleman whether he wear overalls or broadcloth will do it—his instincts forbid it, and society will not tolerate it.

We no longer live in a patriarchal age, for which P. A. seems to show a yearning, where women were chattels and a father might slay his child. Just what honor to a parent meant in those days we have no way of knowing—we live in another age.

But it seems that we come to the kernel of the nut when we hear about Brunhilda—it was not Hagen, by the way, whom she mishandled so shamefully and unwomanly, but H. M. King Guenther of the Rhineland: Hagen wrought Brunhilda's vengeance at her behest. It is a lovely tale involving such magic as would be a very boon to timorous gentlemen in these days but, alas! the art is lost. Now it only remains for P. A. to shed a tear for the long unwept Francisco Cenci and his case for the suffering male will be complete.

I fear my sex is getting the jitters about too much show of strength in what ought to be the weaker sex, and they don't show much skill in concealing those jitters. P. C.

Washington, Jan. 12.

Don't Park Here!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How much longer can local citizenry afford to shake its head at Washington's parking bugaboo and remark, "It's awful." Daily this estimate becomes more apparent, but it takes such an outrage as the annual deluge of "emergency" no-parking signs intended to facilitate snow removal, to bring the matter forcibly to our attention. These signs have been posted the length and breadth of the city, causing untold inconvenience to thousands of motorists and inviting flagrant violation, and how much snow has been removed? Maybe the weatherman is at fault.

Washington must sooner or later squarely face the fact that it has far outgrown its facilities for parking and storing cars. When hundreds of people live in one apartment house, they cannot hope to park their cars in the small street frontage below. Garage space is usually out of the question; there is not enough of it and it is consequently at a premium. To remedy such an acute condition, it would seem a growing Capital City might well consider converting some of its many parks into orderly, supervised and self-sustaining parking areas, located where the demands are the greatest.

A small parking fee would offset the cost of maintenance and the attendants' wages, and allow suitable landscaping to beautify the plot. Such a plan would take thousands of cars off the streets, ease the traffic problem, and in all probability save a few lives each year.

President On The Court.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: President Roosevelt is right in wanting some way of assuring the voters of this Nation that laws passed by 400 lawyers in the Senate and House of Representatives, at a cost of $150,000,000, will be interpreted by a 1937 ruling.

If we must have a Supreme Court to break the laws, why not let the people choose half and the corporations the other half of the judges.

JOHN R. RIGGLES

The Post Impressionist

Signs of Spring.

THE old saying has it that as the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen, but there was nothing in the opening days of January this year to prove its truth. The weather was, as I do not need to tell you, mild. But no matter how cold the weather happens to be it is never cold enough to chill the hope and firm belief that spring is not far off. How can it be far away when the postman has already delivered your almanacs, and your seed catalogues are coming in with every mail?

The seed catalogues are as full of promise as spring itself. Fresh hope springs with every new leaf turned over. (Perhaps these are the new leaves you had in mind when you made your New Year resolution!)

Wonderful hope! Flowers bloom; lawns spread out their lovely carpets; and (somewhere round page 57) vegetables show themselves, all the way through the alphabet from asparagus to turnips; and occasionally yams; or, if you indulge in fruits or flowers, watermelons and zinnias.

And every bit as interesting as the seed catalogue is the almanac which mixes spring medicine with its dates. It gives you the weather for every day in the year and the pills to take for it.

Which reminds me. It grieves me to note, particularly as we were born under the same star, that William Lyon Phelps the other day took a crack at phrenology, astrology, alchemy, fortune telling, palmistry, clairvoyancy and all the other dear delightful little pseudo-sciences in which honest men of simple faith take pleasure and comfort. I would like to ask Mr. Phelps what he has to take its place if he robs us of our simple faith?

William Timothy Call (better look up William Timothy Call. He writes delightfully)—William Timothy Call (who is almost as good at astrology as he is at checkers) declares that the findings of astrology are not less absurd to the lay mind than the guesses of astronomy. And certainly when I read Mr. Einstein—

Eh? I beg your pardon? What has this to do with the coming of spring? Quite so. I'm coming to that.

You see, I resolved a some little time ago to donate my valuable collection of almanacs and seed catalogues to the Library of Congress, and the other day I started out to give those in authority the glad information. Now it is a fact that while I am brilliant and idealistic, an earnest and careful worker, with an artistic temperament and great reserve power (I can prove this by an astrological chart in which I share honors with Admiral Dewey, Dion Boucicault, Woodrow Wilson, William Ewart Gladstone, Rudyard Kipling, Benjamin Franklin, Alexander Hamilton, Daniel Webster, E. A. Poe, Paul Revere, Carter Glass and Mr. Phelps) I am not fond of manual labor (a characteristic shared by the gentlemen named); and so when I ran across a night watchman who does duty at the library I decided not to make the trip. Instead, we sat down at an oyster bar, not half a mile away from the post office building, and I interviewed him.

* * * *

"There's an awful lot of truck in the library," said the night watchman. "You see, pretty nearly everybody leaves it their private collection, which may mean one good book and a thousand others. The thousand others eventually find their way into the cellars. We have the biggest trash heap in the United States. No, mister, don't give your collection to the library. Give it to that relative of yours you love least.

"Mind you," the night watchman went on, "I'm not saying the collections don't do any good. They keep a lot of clerks busy, for one thing; listing and listing and listing; but most of them get to the cellar eventually—the books, I mean—and there they remain until they go to the dust heap."

"Why, you don't mean they actually throw the books away?" I cried, shocked.

"Nothing like that," said the night watchman. "They just naturally resolve themselves into dust. Old-time paper made out of good rags will last for 100 years or more; but you take pulp paper and in 10 or 20 years, or perhaps less, they begin to brown and crumble at the edges. So what we do at regular intervals is to go around with a vacuum cleaner and in just a little while there is nothing left of the books but their backs."

He may have been spoofing me, but he was a fascinating old cuss, was the night watchman, and time went merrily on as we ate oysters and washed 'em down.

Meanwhile the Bureau of Missing Persons was sending out short waves: "Calling all cars! Calling all cars! Look for a venerable old sproozer who answers to the name of Casual Smith. He has a white bandage on his left temple. If he hasn't been run down by an automobile you'll probably find him chinning with somebody on the water front. If found uninjured, ship him to the Army and Navy Club, where his friends await him."

Now, although there is nothing in the astrological chart about brilliant idealists forgetting their engagements, isn't it, I ask you, a sign of spring when the merry lambkin and the respectable old gentlemen kick up their heels and let their responsibilities go hang?

'Dangerous Age.'

I think I will have to see my pastor or my actuary—probably my actuary—about a problem which has been raised by a recent historical event involving a king who shall be nameless here.

The king in question loved a lady who had loved two other males to a serious degree, and the boss-parson of the kingdom took the position that the king should not make her queen because that would seem to indorse to the people the proposition that each human being had a right to at least three lawful mates. I do not like the word "mate" in this connection, because it suggests a sort of thing with which all farm-raised people are familiar and seems to low-rate the beautiful mystery of love. But the word "lover" is equally undignified, and I think I will solve this little kink by skipping on to the next paragraph.

I am in no need of telling that divorce is a legal institution in this country, as sound as the chattle mortgage and the principle of collective bargaining. I know, too, that it is a dreadful thing for a man and wife to live together when the sands of the desert are cold, because that is practically the same as something which I would prefer not to mention in mixed company.

I will mention, however, a suspicion that divorce is often the resort of persons who have reached a certain time of life known as the dangerous age and who would be better off if they would just realize that these throes, like some earlier crises, are just a part of the experience of life, and probably occurred in the lives of their sainted great-grandparents.

Dreadful as it may be for man and woman to continue to live together when the fire appears to be definitely out, it has been even more dreadful in certain conspicuous cases for him and her to go romancing around at an advanced age making notorious chumps of themselves before a public which knows precisely what is going on. We have always before us in this country of cafeteria-courts, where the decrees are kept on the warming table, middle-aged ladies and gentlemen, usually persons of prominence, whose grown or school-wise adolescent children have pleaded with them, for heaven's sake, to hold still another year or two, because the crisis will surely pass, and they may then go down the hill hand-in-hand to the sunset and so forth.

But the problem which I want to present to my actuary has to do with the enormous confusion which seems likely to ensue if we take as a standard the career of a lady who has two former husbands living and apply that to all of us. Suppose every man and woman has a right to two divorces and that every man and woman takes advantage of that right. I might go so far as to take five for a figure, because we do have some prominent parties in our civilized Christian world who marry a fifth time with four former mates—that word begins to seem more appropriate now—still alive.

• • • •

I will go so far as to suppose also that each of these ladies presents to each of her three husbands no fewer than two bundles from heaven and that each husband, in the legal nature of things, becomes responsible for the education, maintenance and medical care of his own bundles. And that these bundles, in turn, must sort themselves out somehow, trying to avoid too close a degree of consanguinity, and mate and get divorced and so on.

If you quarrel with this supposition go ahead and play your own game. And I don't think two children is too many to suppose in the case of two persons who are deeply in love.

So, then, each woman has three husbands and each man three wives and each of them six children, and even if you start with the original cast of the problem you discover that the possibilities are infinite and the perplexities too large and rapid for anyone but my actuary—who is a fictitious character, anyway. There would be 18 children, and if you had ever seen me going over an expense account trying to put in $15.08 for a fare and chair between New York and Washington to absorb a discrepancy when the price is only $8 and something, you would realize where this problem leaves me.

• • • •

I do not wish to propose arbitrary restrictions on poor troubled souls in search of happiness, and the answer to it all. But it is plain that if each of us got a ticket at birth entitling bearer to a certain number of divorces, like a meat ticket in wartime, and used it to the full, the result would be, to use a political word, chaos.

The fathers would be spending too much of their time visiting their children on days appointed by the court, and the current husbands would be staying home from the office to see that the former husbands didn't try to impose on old acquaintance. It has been done.

I think it would be just plain hell, and I haven't carried the problem beyond the third degree. And the expense of the court clerk's office for the handling of the alimony and the bookkeeping and the you're-another ing and the fighting and the killing when the former husbands pass pitying remarks to the current incumbents!

I wish I hadn't brought up the subject, but I think regular polygamy would be better.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Open Wider, Please.

A pain killer given to the public a year ago by a New York dental association doesn't work as well as expected. The dentists of America are thus assured of continued happiness.

• • • •

The solution was a "desensitizer" produced at Columbia University and believed to be something that would make tooth-filling a pleasure. Every experiment at the university was successful, the patients experiencing no pain. But the minute it was tried in the dental offices there were the usual groans.

• • • •

It just goes to show the effect the inside of a dental parlor has on a person's mind.

• • • •

At Columbia the desensitizer was a great success because no patient had to go through the routine of phoning for an appointment, looking for the button marked "Office" and reading all those 1934 Literary Digests.

• • • •

And the treatment was free!

• • • •

That alone takes away a lot of pain.

• • • •

Then, too, at Columbia the dentists admitted they were just experimenting, which put the patients on guard at once. In a dental parlor the doctor is experimenting, but he never admits it.

• • • •

This increases the nerve strain.

• • • •

In those Columbia experiments the customers had the added advantage of not hearing anybody screaming all the way through The National Geographic article on Guam and halfway through the story on the beauties of Java.

• • • •

It is maybe just as well that a pain killer to end all suffering in a dental chair was not really found at this time. It would only make the Democrats all the more conceited.

• • • •

The solution was discovered by Dr. LeRoy L. Hartman, of the Columbia University School of Dental and Oral Surgery. (Oral surgery is the kind of surgery where the dentist promises not to hurt you but never puts it in writing.—Ed.)

Observer At Buenos Aires Conference Interprets America's Work As Cooling Breeze For Feverish Latin America.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Buenos Aires.

IN THE INTER-AMERICAN conference for the maintenance of peace the United States delegation for once, as a non-partisan and objective appraisal must reveal, represented the aspirations and ideals of the peoples and governments of all but three of the 21 nations represented. Editorial comments in the Latin-American press might lead one to amplify the statement and to say that the American delegation and Mr. Roosevelt represented faithfully the masses of the entire New World.

One of the most prominent of the Latin-American delegates believes that by the end of the conference the causes espoused by the United States finally received the support of all but a government and a half (if such could actually be the case). Specifically, this means that all but Sr. Saavedra Lamas and the Chilean delegates remain somewhat aloof from the general feeling of continental solidarity. Uruguay, which had belonged to the "pro-European or Saavedra bloc," ended up somewhat on the fence, but in the last sessions took stands opposed to those of the Nobel prize winner.

This notable achievement was not the work of a day. Though the roots go deep the first buds of the new Latin-American policy of the United States appeared in the Seventh Pan-American conference at Montevideo and the first full flowers are those which opened in Buenos Aires. The new sense and feeling of continental solidarity which was objectively expressed in more than 65 projects of conventions, resolutions and recommendations is the result of a host of steps taken along dozens of fronts in the past few years. The full force of this new spirit is brought to ligh by the fact that every one of the 21 nations of America signed every one of the projects accepted by the conferences and by the fact that the reservations were relatively few and unimportant.

Night Club Hostesses Eager To See Roosevelt.

AMONG the hundreds of thousands of words cabled back about the reception given to Mr. Roosevelt, one story was not included because it did not come to light at the time. It is told now because it seems to convey a little more intimately how the President's visit affected all classes of Argentines. Among the hardest working people in the huge city of Buenos Aires are the night club hostesses whose function it is to dance from nine at night to five in the morning with all comers and to lure the "guests" of the night clubs into buying them drinks and into consuming a lot themselves. A group of these forewent a whole day's rest in order to stand, from nine in the morning until such time as he might pass, on the hot sidewalks of the city's street in order to catch a glimpse of the President of the United States. Their sacrifice of time and energy was typical of many who were curious to see the new idol of the Latin-American world.

Mr. Cordell Hull made an extempore speech which captivated all those who heard him deliver it first in English and then who applauded just as enthusiastically, even though he had already left the room, when the translation into Spanish was read. When he said, in a felicitous phrase which will echo around the Latin American world, "And wherever, in the spirit of this conference, you will lead I will follow you," he not only paid the Latin Americans an unparalleled compliment, but summarized most neatly, the actual public tactics of the American delegation throughout the whole conference, which apparently followed more than it led. Dr. Helio Lobo in a radio speech baptized the economic policies of Mr. Hull as the "Hull Doctrine" and many others came to admire the Hull manner. There seems to be no doubt that Mr. Hull has won a definitely deep and lasting place in the affection of Latin American peoples and governments.

His activity at Buenos Aires must come to form a brilliant chapter in the history of inter-American relations.

Playing much of his role in the background but just as successfully as the President and the Secretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles, the Assistant Secretary of State, emerged from the conference with an excellent reputation for statesmanship, for vision, and for an intelligent and realistic grasp of American realities as well as of international law and its intricacies. His handling of the committee on economic problems, of which he was the president, was highly praised and his speech before the committee on neutrality, delivered extempore and in excellent Spanish, was another of the high spots of the conference and increased the number of Welles' Latin American and American friends.

In spite of the fact that he did not speak Spanish, Prof. Charles G. Fenwick, of Bryn Mawr, authority on neutrality and international law, made a reputation for himself which will be placed on the credit side of the American balance sheet in all assessments of the place of the United States in the new American scheme of things.

American Delegation Moved With Discretion.

AT THE PLENARY sessions and the committee and subcommittee meetings the Americans seemed to obey one rule: Never to speak unless spoken to. They sat quietly listening, watching and following events, exchanging notes and comments among themselves or with members of other delegations. For those who did not know Spanish there were translators who whispered into their ears what was being said by other delegates. The Americans generally only spoke when it was necessary for them to join in a general congratulatory chain or when some matter on which the United States was not prepared to act came up. But almost never did the Americans join in the long or short debates on matters small and large and about which the Latin Americans talked sometimes with great heat. In the open meetings, at least, the Americans pushed nothing through, obstructed not at all, and in most cases influenced decisions in no wise. As far as the eye could see, the Americans followed.

In the concrete evidences of the conferences activity—the accepted projects—it was manifest that the policy of the United States was to compromise and to accept suggestions and to be conciliatory. On many subjects where formerly the United States had always presented many reservations, she now went the whole way and was willing to back up projects which as late as 8 and 13 years ago she would not have allowed the Latin Americans to discuss. Many of her carefully worked out projects emerged from the conference weaker and less effective, but these modifications reveal the spirit in which the Americans worked.

Another technique of the American delegate was to let others fight battles for it. In this way the United States was able to reach understandings with the Nobel Prize winner and to renew, on the old basis, her traditional friendship with Brazil, because it was Brazil that fought the hardest fights for the United States. Prof. Fenwick won the support and active friendship of the Central American states by insisting that they be included in the hotel corridor and secret sessions of the conference. Argentina—or rather her foreign minister—had decided not to waste time with "small fry," a decision which the smaller countries will not soon forget. Central America showed her gratitude for the attitude of the American delegation by supporting many American projects.

Washington's Attitude Jibed With Masses' Hopes.

UNDOUBTEDLY one of the reasons for the success of the United States in the whole conference was that the keynotes of the American projects, of the speeches by all the Americans and their very silences were in harmony with deep and hidden aspirations and dreams of the Latin American multitudes and of those thinkers who have not as yet capitulated to defeatism and extremisms. Cartoons, editorials, feature articles, speeches by Latin Americans all reveal that the participation of the Americans was like a breeze which blew into a hot and feverish atmosphere the cooling ideals of democracy, peace, a dignified international law all upheld or to be upheld by realistic economic and intellectual props.

The reflection of the popular reaction made itself felt in the first meeting of the initiatives committee, where a delegate from a republic long under the thumb of a minor dictator stated that plans and projects of private persons and groups must be studied as democracy must be practiced in this conference. "The voice of the people must be heard," he said.

There were those who believed that the United States delegation was too good, too nice and too conciliatory. Others, however, welcomed this extreme application of the Biblical injunctions to go the second mile and to turn the other cheek. But if the conference is to be taken in itself as a test of the objective value of the Latin American policies of the last few years it is difficult to see how any commentator or observer can help but admit that for sheer virtuosity in

In Morocco

By Barnet Nover

France Wins A Breathing Spell.

IT IS SYMPTOMATIC of Europe's hysterical state of mind that a purely verbal assurance by Adolf Hitler to the French Ambassador that Germany harbors no aggressive designs on Spanish Morocco should have produced such intense relief.

The war clouds that so suddenly arose over North Africa have been, it is now reported, as suddenly lifted. Peace is to be maintained along the Straits of Gibraltar as well as along the Rhine. No German military units are to be sent to Ceuta and Melilla; instead, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht or one of his subordinates is to go to Paris to negotiate a new trade treaty with France. Enlarged trade is the greatest need of the Third Reich; without it there can be no butter on its bread.

Yet it should be pointed out that at the very moment Herr Hitler and M. Francois-Poncet were engaged in animated and friendly conversation in Berlin, and presumably paving the way not only for a settlement of the Moroccan question but also for a general Franco-German rapprochement, German fliers in Spain were performing their ghastly chore. They were raining death and destruction on the inhabitants of Madrid.

• • • •

IT IS THIS incongruity between peaceful talk and warlike action that explains why it is much too early to rejoice in the apparent shelving of the Moroccan crisis. It was the Spanish civil war which provided the necessary setting for a forward move by Germany in Morocco. And as long as that civil war continues to rage there is no certainty that the Moroccan problem will not flare up again.

It now appears that, in part at least, French alarm over Germany's Moroccan plans was anticipatory. It was not because the Third Reich had landed large numbers of troops in the Spanish zone that France mobilized its North African army and its Mediterranean fleet. This was done because the preparations for such a German invasion had apparently been made.

A London Times correspondent who has been making a survey of the situation in the Spanish zone in North Africa has reported that the recent reports of German military activity were exaggerated. But, he adds, there can be little doubt that the Spanish rebels and their German advisers have "transgressed the spirit of the Franco-Spanish treaty of 1912 if they have not yet openly violated its letter."

Mellila has for all intents and purposes been made into a German naval base with as many as seven German warships stationed there at one time. An air base has been built there as well at Tetuan; the Riff iron mines are being worked under the direction of German experts; Nazi propaganda is being disseminated among Arabs and Moors and, apparently, preparations have been completed to shelter and feed some 20,000 soldiers in the zone.

• • • •

THESE ACTIVITIES, it is clear, only became possible because of German co-operation with the Spanish insurgents. Presumably, they represent the price which Gen. Franco would be willing to pay for past and future German aid. The presumption is that while there is a possibility that Franco will have his way in Spain, German hopes of wresting valuable concessions from him will also remain. And it is significant in this connection that Hitler seemingly made no promises to France that there will be any cessation of German naval or economic or propagandist activity in the Spanish zone.

A real elimination of the Moroccan crisis, therefore, must wait upon a solution of the Spanish problem in its larger aspects. But this is not yet a possibility. Great Britain and France are continuing to put pressure on Berlin and Rome to make the non-intervention agreement really operative. The Fascist powers, in their recent replies, have agreed in principle to ban the dispatch of "volunteers" to Spain if the other nations also do so. But their stand is hedged about with reservations.

A strong suspicion exists that now, as in the days when the "hands-off" plan was first advanced, Germany and Italy are stalling for time. They have obviously not given up the hope that Franco will manage to break through at Madrid. And if France, following similar British action, carries out its intent to ban volunteers to Spain, the Spanish loyalists may be so handicapped that German and Italian forces already on the spot will be able to turn the tide of battle.

• • • •

"ALL OMENS," writes Arnaldo Cortesi in a dispatch to the New York Times, "seem to point to intensification of Italian-German action to obtain victory for the rebel forces . . . Italy and Germany are so thoroughly committed to fight communism that Gen. Francisco Franco's defeat would be a very severe blow to their prestige. Therefore, they cannot back out now even if they wished to do."

This is perhaps an exaggeration. After all, Hitler did retreat on the Moroccan question once France, by a display of naval and military force, showed it meant business. He would do so with regard to Spain, prestige or no prestige, France, aided by Great Britain, made a decisive demand upon him and backed up that demand by a similar display of force.

But the difficulty is that while France, Great Britain and, for that matter, Italy, are united in their opposition to the establishment of a German foothold in Spanish Morocco, they are not agreed as to how the Spanish problem is to be solved. So the ruinous civil war goes on, Spain continues to be a battlefield between fascism and antifacism. And as long as that is the case the truce regarding Morocco is not of great fundamental significance.

Mysteries

By William Lyon Phelps

4 Good Ones.

You either like S. S. Van Dine or you don't. No one can regard his intricate and baffling murder mysteries with neutrality. Philo Vance arouses our admiration or our exasperations. Now, I do not particularly care for his mannerisms or for his Regie cigarettes; but just as we forgive men and women of genius for all their sins, so I admire Philo Vance, no matter what or how he speaks. I still think the best story he ever wrote is "The Greene Murder Case;" but this latest one, "The Kidnap Murder Case," is certainly close to it in excellence and excitement. Published by Scribners.)

Eden Phillpotts, the famous British novelist, who writes murder-books with his left hand, has made one of the most ingenious and one of the most subtle in a novel called "Anniversary Murder." Apart from its being well written, and filled with pleasant descriptions of the English town and countryside, it is remarkable as being an instance of deception in motive. No statement is more familiar than the ancient command—Know Thyself; and few commands are more difficult to obey. Who really knows himself? We think we do things from a certain motive, and we often are completely mistaken. (Published by Dutton.)

Helen Reilly's "Dead Man Control" is an admirable and engaging murder story, and is written with her customary charm of style. For she is the daughter of the former president of Hunter College and she is the sister of John Kieran, the brilliant sports writer. This is one of her best novels. (Published by Doubleday, Doran.)

Cortland Fitzsimmons is new to me, but I shall become better acquainted with him, if he can continue to write such admirable books as this one, called "The Whispering Window." No, the word "window" is not a typographical error. This is the story of murders in a big department store. (Published by Stokes.)

I am sorry to say that most of the detective novels I have recently read are dull; but these four are not.

The District Crisis

Unified Civil Regime First Stage of Reform

Present System Should Be Made Efficient Whatever Form of Rule Is Ultimately Adopted.

The Post presents the fourth of a series of articles on the problems of the District of Columbia.

By Merlo J. Pusey.

As is customary in any crisis, reformers are bringing forth many plans to relieve the District of its woes. The report of the Fiscal Relations Committee has opened to active discussion a wide range of governmental as well as strictly fiscal problems. One immediate result is likely to be increased confusion of issues, even though most of the proposals are intended to point the way out of the current befuddled situation.

MERLO J. PUSEY.

For that reason it seems to me particularly desirable to revert to elementary objectives. What is the District seeking? Until that question can be answered with some degree of clarity there is danger that any move may be a step backward. Instead of climbing aboard of any bandwagon that chances to be going by, therefore, thoughtful friends of the District will be inclined to analyze the whole situation in terms of ultimate and immediate objectives.

Leaving the fiscal problem aside for the present, I think it is obvious that any change in the present setup should be aimed at the attainment of more responsible government. Certainly that objective should take precedence over a mere grant of suffrage without the adjustments essential to the success of self-government in Washington. Voteless communities can not be transformed into models of home rule over night. Assuming that our ultimate aim is as large a measure of local control as is consistent with the District's national function, practical considerations suggest a gradual approach to that ideal.

In other words, it seems to me that the District's first concern should be improvement of the regime already in operation. Congress has refused to alter the present local government in any important particular for nearly 60 years. Even with the agitation resulting from the Jacobs Committee report, sweeping changes are scarcely to be anticipated in the near future. And if Congress were so disposed, the District would be well advised to proceed slowly. Another fiasco like that of the former territorial government ought to be avoided at all cost.

Centralized Authority Declared Initial Need.

Perhaps the most reasonable step to take at this time, therefore, would be a united community demand for centralization of municipal authority in the Board of Commissioners. At present the board is pitifully weak. "The District government has grown haphazardly for nearly 60 years," says the Fiscal Relations Committee's report, "with the result that it now has a cumbersome, unintegrated framework. Authority and responsibility are diffused, and there is overlapping within the District government and with semi-independent and regular agencies of the Federal Government."

A similar picture was presented in a study by the Brookings Institutions in 1929:

Though Congress has made provision for a local government, it has followed no logical principle in defining the scope and powers of this government. It has treated the District of Columbia partly as a political subdivision analogous to the territories and dependencies and partly as an administrative department of the National Government. This failure to follow a consistent principle has led to confusion and, it is believed, can be clearly shown to interfer with the efficient and economical conduct of local affairs.

To appreciate the handicap thus imposed upon the Commissioners, we have only to glance at the local measures that Congress will be asked to consider at the current session. One bill would authorize the extension of Prospect street; others would permit more effective control of small loans, require liability insurance of taxicab operators, provide semi-annual inspection for automobiles, place wrestling under control of the District Boxing Commission, make minor changes in the penal code, etc. Each of these measures is thoroughly local in nature. There is something deeply irrational about the procedure which forces them through the congested channels of national legislation.

Commission Powers Constantly Invaded.

Under the present system the Commissioners even lack authority to open a grave. Many of the powers they do possess are constantly invaded by legislative provisions attached to appropriation bills. The result is to leave the chief policy making and executive agency of the District helpless in dealing with many urgent problems. Congress is too busy to govern the District itself, yet it has failed to delegate that responsibility to any local agency.

This oppressive handicap upon the District could be removed by a simple act of legislation. Congress could reserve to itself all power necessary to safeguard the national interest in the Capital City and then delegate to the local government the strictly municipal powers exercised by other American cities. As an added safeguard, it could be specifically provided, as in the act creating the territorial government, that Congress could reject or override any local ordinance contrary to its own policies. With this arrangement there would be little possibility of the District "getting out of hand." On the contrary, the local regime would be in a much better position to render satisfactory servcie to the community, and Congress would be relieved of a burden.

Schools and Libraries To Raise Controversy.

Along with the authority to legislate for the District in routine local matters should go a centralization of administrative powers. Some students of the problem believe that full executive responsibility could best be assigned to a city manager. Others believe it could be more satisfactorily discharged by the Board of Commissioners as now constituted. Whatever the ultimate decision may be, the desirability of bringing the loosely-joined units of the local government into a unified organization is not open to question.

As poited out by the Jacobs committee, the District recorder of deeds and the register of wills hold their offices independently of the Commissioners. Both are appointed by the President. Members of the Board of Public Welfare are selected by the City Fathers but in the administration of relief, charities, etc., the board is not responsible to them. That confusion sometimes results from this division of authority is well demonstrated by the present deadlock over the appointment of a new superintendent of penal institutions.

Any proposal to bring the schools and libraries under jurisdiction of the local government is certain to raise a controversy. Fortunately, that does not appear essential to efficient administration of our educational system. Many cities operate their schools through boards independent of municipal authorities. It is well to recognize, however, that the present arrangement is far from being ideal. Members of the Board of Education are chosen by judges of the United States district court here. These judges, in turn, are appointed by the President, usually from outside the District.

Of course, the courts have nothing to do with education, and it is unreasonable to ask judges to exercise the appointive power. Since this is a highly controversial subject, however, the best strategy might be to raise the standards of local government and so thoroughly to insulate it from politics that school authorities will voluntarily seek a change in their curious status.

Various boards and minor agencies, now operating with little or no supervision, ought to be brought under control of some centralized authority. These administrative details can be properly worked out only after extensive study and perhaps considerable experimentation. A very positive recommendation of the fiscal relations report calls for further study along this line with a view to modernizing the administrative setup.

One valuable survey of this sort was made in 1933-34 at the behest of the Senate District Committee. Unfortunately, however, members of the committee were not able to agree upon a program of recommendations, and its efforts have borne no fruit. There is widespread disagreement among students of the subject as to whether a departmentalized local government with an executive manager at the head would serve the District better than a revitalized Board of Commissioners to which all local agencies would be directly responsible. To some extent the type of organization to be developed here will depend upon the outcome of this controversy. In the meantime, however, the need for co-ordination within various departments is obvious.

As an example of the obsolescence that has crept into some local agencies, taxpayers were recently billed for taxes that were seven or eight years overdue. In some cases perplexed property owners were unaware that these special levies had ever been made, since notices were not included in their annual tax bills. By the adoption of a new taxing, billing and collecting system now being set up the Commissioners hope to eliminate flagrant weaknesses of this sort. But the task of reorganization should not be delayed until abuses force action in isolated cases.

Lack of Co-ordination Cited by Committee.

The deficiencies of the local government in this respect have been effectively summarized by the Jacobs committee in these words: "In general the departments of the District government are staffed by efficient administrators, but they labor under the handicaps of an inadequate co-ordinated organization and cumbersome legislative procedures." These impediments to good government ought to be removed regardless of what form the governing agency may take.

It seems to me that effective reorganization becomes the more important when the community is looking forward to a larger measure of self-government. In short, an efficient administrative machine may well be developed before any popular regime takes it over. The territorial government of 1871-74 seems to have failed largely because it was an unco-ordinated and irresponsible agency. When and if Congress agrees to another experiment in home rule for Washington it should be under the most favorable circumstances.

At any rate, nothing will be lost from the ultimate viewpoint, and a great deal will be gained from both the immediate and ultimate points of view, if the current agitation for reform is directed first toward the improvement of the governmental machinery already in operation.

Options Planned for D. C. Airport

The Washington Airport Commission indicated yesterday it was preparing to place options on selected District airport sites as Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, secretary of the commission, introduced a bill authorizing a $10,000 appropriation.

The commission was given $10,000 last year for hiring expert advisers and making appraisals. Money requested for options, however, was denied.

It is understood that the commission will put options on several sites and leave the final selection to Congress.

McCarl Warns Reorganization Too Dangerous

Text of Statement Citing Threat to Foundation of Government.

Text of former Comptroller General McCarl's statement on President Roosevelt's reorganization proposals:

Some of the changes suggested by the President's committee are vastly more far-reaching than appears on the surface, and at least one goes to the very foundation of our plan of self-government.

For instance, its proposal to emasculate our independent accounting system so brings into question the authority of the Congress to effectively safeguard and prescribe the uses of public moneys as to go far beyond any matter of reorganizing existing agencies. It appears in effect a proposal to revamp the respective jurisdictions of two of the three co-ordinate branches of Government—with loss by the Congress of means whereby to discharge its constitutional responsibilities to the country.

Basis of Independence.

The independence of our accounting system is based upon the authority and responsibility of the Congress to safeguard and to prescribe the uses of the public moneys. Such authority is essentially in the people's forum in any self-governing society—and is constitutionally vested in the Congress of the United States. It would be little more than an idle gesture for the Congress to stipulate or limit by law the uses to which a particular appropriation might lawfully be employed and be without means of exacting observance of such law by the spending agencies. The present law provides that means by imposing a duty upon the General Accounting Office, an agency independent of the spending branch, to see to it that such laws are observed. If the independent accounting system should be emasculated as proposed, the Congress would be without such means and would be impotent in these vital matters.

Then, too, when economy in Government is so utterly essential, due to our public debt condition, any wisdom in striking down our one money-saving agency is difficult to see.

But even if these vital matters were not involved, the proposal to give the Treasury Department such a strangle hold on all other departments and activities of Government would seem woefully to unbalance the machinery of the executive branch.

Camouflaged by Attack.

The fact that the proposal is camouflaged by an attack upon the administration of the independent accounting system during the first 15 years of its existence must not be permitted to divert attention from the real and vital issue involved. Such attack appears to have been necessary, as so bold a proposal could hardly have been advanced behind a lesser smokescreen. Fortunately, the misleading and inaccurate statements appearing in the committee's report as basis for its recommendations are all susceptible of correction by public records.

Even if during those 15 years we were prevented from being 100 per cent perfect in exacting law observance in the uses of public moneys—and even if tender toes were necessarily trod upon in the effort—such considerations afford no reason whatsoever why so fine a system and one so essential to the success of our plan of self-government, should be emasculated.

It should be strengthened, not crucified.

The fact that our one great offense was that of trying too hard to keep the spending agencies within the law, is a criticism that should be heartening to that upstanding force that mans the General Accounting Office.

I fear the President has been misled by his advisers and doubt that the Congress will give much consideration to any proposal involving a giving up of means adequate to discharge of its constitutional responsibilities

The system—the independence of the accounting system from domination and control by the executive branch—is the vital thing. It would be a long step backward for the Congress to surrender its right to exact law observance in the uses of the public moneys.

Goodwin to Lead Controller Unit

J. C. Goodwin, assistant controller of Woodward & Lothrop's, has been named chairman of the payroll committee of the National Capital group of controllers.

Members of the committee include C. J. Lyon, assistant controller of Lansburgh & Bro.; J. F. Brown, controller of Kann's; W. M. Loman, director of research at the Hecht Co.; E. E. Snyder, controller of the Raleigh Haberdashers; A. Croonin, controller of the William Hahn & Co., and J. J. Breen, industrial engineer of National Cash Register.

These appointments were made at the January meeting of the organization, which was held in the Raleigh Hotel. Particular attention was paid to a close survey of the Social Security act and its employer-employe relationship.

Moscow Approves 19-Billion Budget

Moscow, Jan. 13 (AP).—Without a dissenting vote the union central executive committee today adopted the 1937 state budget, including the largest peace-time defense appropriation in Russia's history.

Committee sessions on the $19,000,000,000 budget, of which more than $4,000,000,000 is for a Soviet war chest, were brought to a conclusion by Grégory Grinko, finance commissar. The committee also approved interim decrees prohibiting abortion, tightening divorce regulations, increasing bounties for large families and lowering the conscription age.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Settin' Around.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 13.

When Twentieth Century Fox Corporation formed itself 18 months ago by merging two lesser companies its crying need was stars. Without stars, there was question of survival. Never has a studio staged a more desperate fight, nor does film history reveal a record of quicker or better results. Within one year and six months, these stars and prospective stars have been groomed to fame: Simone Simon, Tyrone Power, Sonja Henie, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, June Lang, Michael Whalen, Brian Donlevy, Arline Judge, Virginia Field, John Carradine, Arthur Treacher. Hats off, I say, to far-seeing Darryl Zanuck and his associates for plumbing the depts and bringing to surface such prizes.

ALICE FAYE.

Mary Rogers, daughter of the late Will, gets her first break in support of Victor McLaglen in "Nancy Steel Is Missing," and it appears fated that she will join the company's future star list. Officials feared public resentment to her screen career, on the grounds that she was trading on her father's folowing. Quite to the contrary, fan reaction to Miss Rogers has been definitely pro-Mary.

On this same set, McLaglen pointed out an amusing situation. An extra had worked in this picture two days when he was arrested for speeding. His sentence was five "nights" in jail. He is permitted to report for work each morning, but each evening he must return to jail. The judge stipulated this odd punishment to save embarrassment and expense to the studio, which might otherwise have been forced to retake dozens of scenes.

On an "On the Avenue" set, Harry, of the Ritz Brothers, offered me a chair. I sighed heavily, sat down—and went through to the floor. "That's a heluva chair!" I yipped. "Why do you have it on the set?" "Just," snipped Harry, "to rob columnists of their dignity!"

Burton Holmes.

"ENGLAND, WALES AND SCOTLAND." First of five travel talks by Burton Holmes, illustrated with still and motion pictures. Slide coloring by Mildred Petrie and Grace Nichols. Presented under the auspices of the Community Center Department, at the Roosevelt High School. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

The back-country, the less-frequently traveled portions of southern England, Wales and Scotland were offered to Washington's vicarious travelers last evening in the auditorium of the Theodore Roosevelt High School as Burton Holmes presented the first of five travel talks before a capacity audience of nearly 1,200.

With the customary reticence in mentioning contentious topics, Mr. Holmes held himself to a rather prosaic account of his departure from New York, arrival in England and subsequent travels.

Indeed, in this talk (it could hardly be dignified by the term, lecture) Mr. Holmes seemed off form and still further handicapped by a territory not as pregnant of thrilling description as some of his selections have been.

Yet the unnatural hesitancy of delivery did not militate against an entertaining evening, embellished with motion pictures and excellently colored slides. And in some spots in the England discussion, novelty was added through the introduction of films made in 1902, 1904 and 1914.

Among the many places visited in this journey were Gloucester, Oxford and some of its colleges; Bath, Durham, glimpses of the industrial and mining area of southern Wales; Harlech, Llandudno and then to Scotland and the mile-and-a-half Trossachs, the golf courses of St. Andrews and Gleneagles, the Cowal games at Dunoon, with hundreds of athletes and pipers, a brief survey of the wall built by the Roman, Hadrian, to keep "the wild Scots" out of England, and finally through the English lake country, Rochester and Canterbury, to Dover and departure to France.

While presenting some views of infrequently visited metropolitan districts, Mr. Holmes' principal contributions were his scenes of gardens and the country areas, beautiful enough in black and white, but exquisite in color.

The speaker, who for the first time is presented under the auspices of the Community Center Department, was formally introduced by Maj. Henry Frank Heywood, M. C., commercial secretary of the British Embassy, who had been presented to the audience by William P. Kilgore, attache of the Center.

The second of Mr. Holmes' talks—on "Trobuled Spain"—will be given next Wednesday evening.

Play Screen Leads in Famous Play

Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster, as they appear in the screen version of Sean O'Casey's famous play of "The Plough and the Stars," which will be given its world premiere in RKO-Keith's Theater in this city tomorrow. Miss Stanwyck was at her best in her last picture, "Banjo on My Knee," and it is confidently expected that she will excel that performance in the Irish play.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

A Successful Psychic.

Experts take enormous liberties with bidding conventions, but there is one thing that they never, or rarely do, and that is make a psychic takeout in a suit that is higher ranking than the one they intend for the final contact. Consider South's technique in today's hand. It is true that he was "fancy," but it must be noted that he incurred very little, if any, risk.

North, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable; both sides 60 part-score.

	♠ 5 4 ♡ A J 10 8 ◇ A 10 4 3 2 ♣ K Q
♠ K J 9 3 2 ♡ — ◇ 7 6 5 ♣ J 6 4 3 2	North West East South	♠ A Q 10 8 ♡ 8 7 ◇ K Q J 9 ♣ A 10 8
	♠ 7 6 ♡ K Q 9 6 4 3 2 ◇ 8 ♣ 9 7 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Dbl.	2 ◇	2 ♠
3 ◇	Dbl.	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass

Over East's takeout double of the one heart, South, with his tremendous heart support, but very poor general hand and lack of defense, really wanted to "psych" in spades, since that was the suit which could embarrass him most if the opponents should bid it. Of course, he also had to fear both diamonds and clubs but at least he could overbid these at the same level with hearts. But he realized that to bid spades as a bluff would be very dangerous, since if North had good spade support he would raise strongly, and then hearts could be returned to only at a prohibitive level. South discarded the thought of preempting in hearts, since he felt the state of the score and his own extreme heart length would merely induce West to "stretch" for a bid. He adopted the two diamond psychic as the best of the safe psychic bids, intending, of course, after he had misled the opponents as to the distribution of his hand, to return to hearts.

East certainly had a splendid double of three diamonds, and West's pass to three hearts was also correct, since his partner might be waiting for it with a bludgeon. East went very far astray when he doubled three hearts. He foolishly assumed that, since South had bid diamonds and North had supported them, he would make two or three diamond tricks even with hearts as trump. The fallaciousness of this assumption is obvious—there was no guarantee that South's diamond takeout had been "on the level." West cannot be blamed for leaving in the double—it was not up to him to nurse his partner.

Obviously North-South made an over-trick at three hearts doubled, whereas four spades would have been a laydown even against the best defense of a diamond opening lead and a continuation which South would have ruffed.

CHAPTER 13.

"Yeah—that's a harder one," Sutton reflected. "We can get anybody out again to investigate that house. . . . But Cora. She cooks. She don't do housework. Anyway, there wouldn't be any work in a room nobody uses. . . . Oh, well, she's harmless," he laughed. "She's prob'ly looking for clues. I'm not going to let her screwy notions throw me off."

When I returned I found Jean home alone. Cora and Lee and even Frank had gone to the funeral.

Jean was out in the kitchen fluttering about nervously and obviously glad to have some one in the house with her.

"I don't lak funerals," she explained, smiling wanly and shivering. "I tell Cora, go; I get dinner started for her. She's inth'rested. She ban know them all."

I experienced a youth's fleeting regret that such beautiful skin and eyes could house such stupidity, and recalled rather gratefully Larry's having said maybe Jean wasn't as dumb as her poor English made her appear.

"Weren't you afraid to stay here alone" I asked her.

Jean's dimples showed faintly. She shrugged. "Yes. But sun ban shining out here. Ven it's dark I'm afraid."

"Listen, Jean," I said, confidentially, "they think I stayed here with you this afternoon. I had to go down town for a little while. You won't tell on me?"

A Promise From Jean.

Jean rolled big Swedish eyes in mischievous appreciation of the deception.

"No," she promised. "You ban here all the time." It was the only time I was ever to hear her laugh.

I had barely donned my uniform when the others returned from the funeral. It was interesting to see the servants "dressed up."

Cora, especially. She hobbled in importantly, a pink edition of Marie Dressler in "Min and Bill," even to the wisps of stray hair failing from beneath the plumed hat. The black satin suit which she wore in the manner of a large, well-filled sack, was a little short in front. And her glowing nose was evidence of recent weeping. At that, I felt Cora was in her element—a harmless soul glorying in seeing herself one of the tragic figures in a great murder melodrama.

Frank was rather different, too, in his best clothes. Although the suit was nondescript and worn and the collar conspicuously rubber-like, his cleaned-shaven face showed more intelligence than was noticeable beneath the week-day stubble.

Only Lee looked the same, although he had changed his white duck house coat for a blue serge one which matched his trousers.

Mark and Marilyn went directly into the library, ordering Lee to build a fire in the grate for them, and emerged only in time to dress for dinner.

Dinner was more cheerful than any meal I had served them before. All three of the diners seemed relieved, as if some load had been lifted from their spirits. Julian was still a little more preoccupied than the other two.

Lee Asked to Quit.

"Know what Lee asked me in the hall just now?" Mark said suddenly, apparently addressing Julian.

"No. What's he up to?"

"He was begging me to let him leave right away. Seems he made an agreement." Mark mused, "to give 30 days' notice when he decided to quit. He thinks he's legally bound to live up to it. Would be thrown in jail if he didn't. So he wants me to release him from it."

"In other words." Julian pulled his mouth into a one-sided grin, "He wants to quit and he wants to quit now."

"He sure does. He seems unnaturally anxious to me. And I want the police to have every chance . . ."

"Have they given you any report?" Julian asked quickly.

"No; but Sutton says Holbrook is helping——"

"Yah," snarled Julian. "What are they doing? Where are they?"

"Well—I really think they're working on it. I don't know how, though."

"What could they be doing — the body's buried. And they're not around here."

"What could they?" Julian asked significantly.

"Well, Sutton asked me to see that none of the household left. So I just told Lee he'd have to stick it out."

Julian nodded. "What did he say?"

"Oh, nothing. Just looked sick."

Marilyn lifted her eyes in disapproval. "That poor boy? He's scared, Mark. You don't think he had anything to do with the murder, do you?"

I like to watch her talk, lights coming and going in her eyes and faint color in her cheeks But I could only steal glances at her. She had a cultured voice. And there was an unusually keen mind behind that girlish beauty

Mark shrugged. "I don't know! I don't think anybody on the place has but—there you are. I don't believe in ghosts. What do you think, Julian?"

Julian spent some time buttering one of Cora's hot biscuits. "I think you're right about keeping Lee . . . The police wouldn't likely let him go, anyhow . . . But—you mean what do I think about Lee's having committed the crime?"

Mark nodded. Marilyn held her fork poised, waiting tensely for the answer.

"It's as you say. He was here. So he's a suspect. So are we all."

"Ooh!" Marilyn shuddered. "Isn't it terrible!"

"But," Julian went on. "I don't know why Lee would want to kill your father and brother. Do you?"

"No!"

"Why, he hadn't any reason!" Marilyn declared indignantly. "And I don't believe he'd do it. He's a nice boy. Always cheerful . . . If it's anybody," here she lowered her voice and looked over her shoulder. I walked to the other side of the room on an errand calculated to impress her with the idea that I wasn't following their conversation. And I didn't hear her whispered finish.

"Cora?" Mark gasped. He frowned comically and looked at his finance as if he thought he'd misunderstood.

"Go on and laugh!" Marilyn said seriously. "But she's as capable of it as anybody."

Julian smiled indulgently. And I left the room, afraid of seeming interested.

So there was a mutual dislike between Marilyn and Cora. I'd pass that on to Larry. He might make something of it.

Julian and Bob.

It wasn't hard for Julian and me to talk confidently in his room after dinner. Mark and Marilyn were again in the library and the servants were all busy downstairs.

I said I'd been trying to think back over the time I had been here. And I told him all the clews I could recall, giving, however, fictitious sources for my information whenever the genuine one would associate me with the police.

And Larry had been right. Julian was impressed. He took notes on what I said, his face lighted with more pleasure than I had ever seen it.

"Bob, this is wonderful!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "Why didn't you tell me this yesterday morning in the library when we talked it over?"

"I kinda hated to, sir," I replied. "None of it makes sense. It just sounds like everybody was guilty. I didn't think it could help you any."

"That's just because you've never tried to trace a criminal," he assured me disarmingly. "Fact is, I'll wager half the things you've told me are real clews."

"But which ones?"

"I don't know yet," he laughed. "But," he became solemn again, the perpendicular lines in his lean face giving it a futuristic touch, "I'm going to turn every stone I can to find out."

"Aren't the police working on it any more, sir?"

"Oh, sure . . . I suppose so . . . I wish I knew how much they're working on it," he added, frowning. "If they come around again and talk to you, see if you can find out. It's safer for you to appear inquisitive. . . . I don't suppose they rate you as much of a suspect. The rest of us are, of course."

"Yes, sir—if they ever talk to me again . . ."

"Not that it matters . . . They were working on the other murder. They worked it around to suicide. . . . Suicide!" He sneered, a reminiscent gleam in his eyes. "Listen, Bob. I'll tell you something . . . Did you read about Alexander Brian's suicide in the paper?"

Julian Discloses Secrets.

"Yes, sir," I replied quickly, glad to supply a source for any information he would discover I had about Alexander's murder.

"The first day they told quite a bit. Then the police hushed 'em up. There was something the papers didn't get that first day, though. Listen, Bob. You've told me a lot of things. Now I'm going to tell you a few."

He told me the same thing Sutton had about the corpse being turned over after the room had been locked and a man placed on guard at the door.

I gasped. "How did you know, sir? Did the police tell you?"

"You bet they didn't! But I unlocked this door for them," he pointed to the door beside the bed which led into Alexander's room. "They tried to hurry and shoo me out, but I saw the change, all right!"

"Why, what do you make of that, sir?" I asked.

"Several things they didn't seem to make!" he snorted. "And the principal one is that it was not a suicide."

"But how could a person get in if all the doors were locked and watched by police, as you say?"

"I'll show you." Julian rose and opening the door, entered Alexander's room, motioning for me to follow.

Wallace Asks Tax to Restrict Profit on Sugar

Declares Some Producers 'Unduly Enriched;' Feels Levy Is Legal.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace contended yesterday some manufacturers of sugar have been "unduly enriched" in the past year and urged that Congress revive a former tax on the product.

He told reporters Agriculture Department solicitors had decided the action would be constitutional, although the Supreme Court in its January 6, 1936, ruling on the agricultural adjustment act held a previous levy to be invalid.

Wallace suggested either the former one-half cent a pound tax, or double this rate.

"Sugar is a special case," he replied to questions whether his proposal was a step toward reviving the invalidated farm aid act.

(The act taxed sugar along with cotton, wheat and other basic farm products, using the proceeds for benefit payments to producers.)

Wallace coupled his tax proposal with the prediction Congress "might" revive benefit payments for Western, Southern and insular cane and beet growers, but pointed out this would be legislation separate from the proposed tax. The Supreme Court objected specifically to uniting them in the old farm act.

Explaining the "undue enrichment" of the sugar manufacturers, Wallace contended they failed to reduce prices to consumers when the court held they no longer had to pay the former tax.

Lot of Paper.

NEW YORK, JAN. 13.

Whiting, the paper magnate, was being chided by some of his Liberty League friends for a lack of zeal in opposing New Deal legislation. "For four years this has been going on," they complained to him, "and it looks like it will continue four more years. Why not join with us?" . . . "I'm not radical," the paper industrialist replied, "but there's a lot to be said for this New Deal legislation!" . . . For one thing it uses an awful lot of paper.

SALLY RAND is now being described as last year's Gypsy Rose Lee . . . Lawrence Tibbett and Jascha Heifetz couldn't attend the Musicians Emergency Fund dinner to Bori at the Waldorf. Tibbett was ill that night and Heifetz had to play an out-of-town engagement.

WALTER WINCHELL, who was given a ticket for passing a red light in Hollywood, received offers from the Native Sons to quash the ticket for him. The fine, in such cases, always is $5. The columnist insisted upon paying for his crime—but was fined only $4. He immediately sent his paper an expense voucher—for $5! . . . A noted feminist soon will startle Wall Street by applying for membership on the New York Stock Exchange.

MARGARET GIBBS and her sister walked into Lindy's restaurant. The headwaiter held up two fingers and asked: "How many, please, two?" The Gibbs sisters are Siamese twins!" . . . Paul Haakon, who portrays Casanova in "The Show Is On," isn't as fortunate as was the Great Lover. On opening night Haakon tripped; since then he's inflicted five saber wounds during his fencing number, and last week Casanova history almost had to be rewritten when his sword broke during the duel.

ON JANUARY 1 the morning newspapers published photos of celebrants at various cafes ushering in the New Year. All these photos had been taken two nights earlier and were placed at the newspaper offices 24 hours before the old year was out.

FRANK PARKER, the radio singer, is a member of the cast of "Howdy, Stranger," which opens tonight. Parker plays the role of a hitch-hiker. At the Newark tryouts he scoured his dressing room, looking for the tramp suit he wears in the first act. Only then did he discover that his assiduous valet had found the suit and, somewhat amazed at his employer's untidiness, sent it to the cleaners. "Here," Frank told him, "quick—take it back and have it unpressed." . . . Barbara Hill's deb party at the Persian room last night had Broadway's traffic cops daffy. The highlight of the affair was a scavenger hunt, with all the socialites being instructed to bring back, within a half-hour, the autographs of five celebrities, three ice cubes and a genuine, honest-to-goodness traffic summons!

Grand Jury Brings Twelve True Bills

The District Grand Jury yesterday returned 12 indictments to Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court. The presentments were the first cases to be inquired into by the present grand jury, which was sworn in last week.

Those indicted were as follows: Estelle Harris, Elenora Casselle, Jeanette Kidd, William A. Couthan and Buster Jackson, robbery; Nathaniel Branch and Robert Williams, joy-riding; Frank E. Ford, housebreaking; Horace Bell, Robert Lewis and Leo Georgie, housebreaking and larceny; James L. Mullen, assault with a dangerous weapon, and James E. Donnelly, violation of the postal laws.

The grand jury returned an ignoramus in the case of Charles Vanderhuff, who was being investigated in connection with a larceny charge.

The Warner Brothers' New Sheridan Theater Opens Tonight as Fifteenth Unit in Local Theater Chain

A New 1,000-Seat House Will Throw Open Its Doors on Upper Georgia Avenue at 7:45 Tonight; Embodies Every New Feature of Theater Design; "The Plough and the Stars" Comes to RKO-Keith's on Friday, Fostered by All of the Investiture of a World Premiere; Mr. Truex Pays Some Compliments—and Receives Some; Stage Gossip.

TONIGHT at 8:30 o'clock the Warner Brothers' new Sheridan Theater will be officially dedicated as upper Georgia avenue's newest picture playhouse.

The inaugural ceremonies—and inaugurations seem to be in the air these days—will be featured by an address by Mr. Ernest H. Pullman, president of the Manor Park Citizens Association.

BELL.

Audrey Sieber, the charming young woman who has served so long and so distinguished a period of service as mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, will introduce Mr. Pullman.

Joseph Bernard, vice president in charge of theater operations for the Warner Brothers, will head the list of out-of-town guests.

The Sheridan, which is situated at 6217 Georgia avenue, between Sheridan and Rittenhouse streets, will open its doors for the first time at 7:45 to allow patrons ample time to inspect the manifold superiorities of the newest addition to the chain of Warner theaters in the Washington territory.

The theater seats 1,000 on one floor and embodies all of the newest ideas in theater design and construction.

John Eberson, well-known theater architect, designed the house, which is the fifteenth unit in the Warners' Washington circuit.

"Sing Me a Love Song," the new Warner production, with James Melton, Patricia Ellis and Hugh Herbert, will be the screen feature to be presented at tonight's opening. An added attraction will be the Technicolor short-reel subject, "Give Me Liberty."

It is distressing to learn that Rudolph Berger, Washington branch exchange manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is confined in the Episcopal Hospital with a tonsillectomy, performed last Friday, and a later eye operation that came along to make the score perfect—for the operating surgeons. It is the heartfelt wish of this column that an old and valued friend may be out and in circulation again at the earliest possible moment.

It was a pretty fine luncheon party that District Manager Jim Brennan, Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, and George Gerhardt, on a "good will tour" of the provinces—which will only carry him something like 6,000 miles before he gets through with it—threw in the handsome quarters of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel yesterday.

The item of chief concern, as goes almost without saying, was "The Plough and the Stars," the film version of the Sean O'Casey stage play which nobody seemed to know was being given its world premiere in Washington.

Unfortunately, I was precluded from the Sabbath evening preview of this much-discussed subject by a domestic emergency, but from all that I can gather, from the chatter of those who viewed it, it bids fair to match the stage play in deep-seated and sustained appeal.

At least, it has the advantage of a large number of the members of the cast of the original Irish Abbey Theater Players, from Dublin, who placed the work in the dramatic records of the American, as well as the Hibernian, theater as one of the gems of simple dramatic exposition of common problems of a people involved in political and military turmoil.

There will be more about this in Saturday morning's paper. In the meantime, I still insist, it was a delightful and delectable luncheon.

There will be an especial fillip to the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater during Inauguration Week. In "One in a Million," the screen feature of the bill, Borrah Minevitch and His Harmonica Rascals play an important part in the creation of a comedy atmosphere that is capped by the Three Ritz Brothers. It is probably something less than a coincidence that Minevitch and his mouth organ band will be costarred with Johnny Weissmuller and Lupe Velez on the stage bill. If that doesn't add up to a swell piece of booking, then I never have been in a theater. Or have I ever been?

There was a time when most of the nominations for juvenile preferment on the stage were made by Gus Edwards, who brought along a surprising number of youthful players possessed of what Noel Coward inspirationally designates "star quality." That distinction now has passed to Benny Davis, probably the most able discerner of stellar caliber that the current theater can boast.

An old song writer himself, an actor of parts and impresario of various night clubs and musical productions, Benny seems to have an almost uncanny power of discrimination in his selection of embryonic stellar talent. The list of those now prominent, first brought to public attention under his banner, would more than fill this column.

It will be fun to greet an old friend again at the Earle on Friday and observe how well his selective sense still is functioning.

It is always gratifying to have a veteran player express something in accord with the critic's point of view. So it was that on Tuesday night this column was particularly regaled by some of the nice things that were said to it by Ernest Truex, leading comic in "Frederika," current at the National Theater. Mr. Truex and his associate players, headed, of course, by Helen Gleason, of the Metropolitan, and Dennis King, are attempting to evolve from Franz Lehar's delightful operetta something of sheer beauty to both eye and ear. It seems to me they already have. It is interesting to note in this connection—and in our brief chat we went back to "The Good Little Devil," in which Truex was costarred with Mary Pickford, under the late David Belasco's management; "The Dummy," "Very Good Eddie" and others of the remote Truex vehicles—that "Frederika," when it gets to New York will mark his thirty-first Broadway production.

Young Canadian Stars With Savoyards

Miss Brenda Bennett, whose likeness appears above, is a native of Winnipeg, and has achieved a remarkable success for one so young with the veteran company coming to Washington to present the Gilbert and Sullivan operas under the distinguished aegis of the D'Oyly Carte Company. The D'Oyly Carters are enjoying their most successful American season this year, their engagement in New York having been extended three times. They will be heard here for two weeks, beginning in the National Theater next Monday night.

The Savoyards Come to Town For Fortnight

D'Oyly Carte Opera Company Will Lead Week's Bills at National.

For two weeks beginning next Monday night in the National Theater, the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, of London, which has enjoyed its most successful American season this year, will be heard in a repertoire of the Savoyard operettas of Gilbert and Sullivan, with a definitely brilliant cast—as is always the case with this organization—in the principal roles. There will be some newscomers to the personnel of the company since its last appearance here, but, in the large view, the singing principals will be in large measure what they were on the last visit. This means artists of the first rank, who bring to the works that have endured for something more than half a century a brilliance of performance and a clarity of interpretation that no other company seems able even remotely to approximate. There will be the usual matinees. The schedule of bills will be found in the advertising columns of this and the other Washington papers.

To Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow comes one of the most engaging musical comedy screen treats of the season in "One in a Million," the first starring vehicle for the unsuspected talents of Miss Sonja Henie, champion ice skater, who also proves himself a bit of an actress. There was a good deal in these columns yesterday about the merit of this picture and after 24 hours of retrospect there seems to be no reason to retract anything that previously has been said. In addition to Johnny Weissmuller and Lupe Velez, who will headline the vaudeville for Inauguration week, the stage will accommodate Borrah Minevitch and His Harmonica Rascals, who play an important part in "One in a Million." Here is a bill that should attract the multitudes if any one ever did.

The Earle Theater on Friday will inaugurate a new bill to celebrate the Presidential event that will be headed on the screen by Jean Arthur and George Brent in "More Than a Secretary." They are, of course, supported by a cost of the first rank and a production that will preserve the reputation of the producing company, which happens to be Columbia. On the stage the program will be headlined and supplied in its entirety, as a matter of fact, by Benny Davis and his all-new "Stardust Revue." Benny Davis is the contemporary theater's greatest discoverer of new talent and his stage acts always may be relied upon to provide new personalities, novelty and pep. This, one assumes, will be no exception.

At RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning tomorrow, the chief screen feature will be RKO-Radio's film version of Sean O'Casey's celebrated play of "The Plow and the Stars," with Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster in the principal roles. This extremely effective drama of Irish life has been done in Washington on the legitimate stage more than once, and in celluloid form has the advantage of the presence of many members of the original cast from the Abbey Theater in Dublin. The secondary feature of the new bill on Fifteenth street will be a new issue of the "March of Time." The program will be further augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News.

So great was the F street success of "After the Thin Man" that this amusing comedy-drama, costarring William Powell, Myrna Loy and Asta, the sapient pooch, will be returned to the screen of Loew's Palace Theater for a week's repeat engagement, beginning tomorrow. The bill will be completed by short reel subjects and a new issue of the newsreel.

Following an increasing trend in the direction of the revival of films that have made deep public impressions, the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, for the week beginning tomorrow, will bring back the picture in which William Powell and Kay Francis made perhaps their first and greatest impression, "One Way Passage." This is the picture with the indeterminate ending that once provided a European tour to the winner of a Post contest. The bill will be completed by full newsreel and short sound subjects.

Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor in Metro-Goldwyn Mayer's superb picturization of "Camille" also will return to F street for an additional week as chief feature at Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow. A stellar cast appears in support of the star and popular young leading man in this subject and completely justifies the high degree of popularity this newest of the picturizations of the old classic tale has enjoyed. Short reels and news events added.

Beginning next Sunday, the Little Theater will present a revival of "Arrowsmith," based on the Sinclair Lewis novel, with Ronald Colman, Helen Hayes and other notables in the pivotal roles. Short sound subjects and newsreel will complete the bill.

For inauguration week at the Rialto Theater, the screen attraction will be a revival of the Marx Brothers' picturization of that magnificent insanity called "Horse Feathers." The program also will include "The First World War" as an added attraction. This is the item assembled by Laurence Stallings. Added short reels will augment the entertainment.

The Gayety Theater announces Yvette, known as "the girl of the muff" as the chief feature of its new burlesque bill for inauguration week. There will be midnight shows at the Gayety on Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week. The comedy end of goings-on will be looked to by a corps of the Independent Burlesque Association's most capable comedians.

17,000 Heirs File For Vast Estate

Philadelphia, Jan. 13 (AP).—More claims to the $17,000,000 estate of Mrs. Henrietta E. Garrett were filed today on the eve of hearings before a master in Orphans Court to determine the rights of more than 17,000 contenders.

Claims from all over the world and from all strata of society have poured in since word passed around that Mrs. Garrett, who died in 1930, left a will disposing of only $62,500 of an estate of about $6,000,000.

Mrs. Garrett was the widow of Walter Garrett, who amassed his fortune in the manufacture of snuff.

Hundreds in Washington Society Attend Receptions Given by the Wives of Three Members of Cabinet

'At Homes' of Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Swanson and Mrs. Wallace Attract Largest Number of Guests in Memory of Capital Hostesses.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Three Cabinet wives were "at home" yesterday afternoon and in consequence, practically all of the members of Capital society were out calling.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, received at their neighboring homes on R street and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, received at her apartment in the Wardman Park.

Most of the hundreds of guests who called at one made the rounds of all of the receptions. Mrs. Morgenthau, wearing a gown of violet tone, had with her in the receiving line Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor and Mrs. Stephen Gibbons. Mrs. Josephine Roche, who was to have assisted in receiving, was unable to be present.

From the drawing room the guests moved through the paneled library into the dining room, where the tea table was set. It was appointed in white and silver with white lilacs and a few delicate orchids in a low silver bowl forming the centerpiece.

Assistants Listed.

Alternating in pouring were Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia; Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. William Franklin Sands, and Mrs. Henry Flood.

Due to the fact that all of the members of Congress are again in residence in the Capital and have just begun their part in this season's social life, the "at-homes" were almost the largest any of the hostesses could remember.

There was a military air about Mrs. Swanson's reception, with sailors and marines assisting in handling the throngs of guests and summoning their cars as they left.

Capt. John R. Beardall announced them as they were received by the hostess in the drawing room on the second floor. Her gown matched the deep rose draperies at the long windows, and the color of the roses which were used in bouquets there and in adjoining rooms. On the tea table was a centerpiece of yellow jonquils, Japanese iris and small white chrysanthemums.

Others Receiving.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Swanson were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations; Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of the Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews.

Shortly after 6 o'clock, when the final guests were departing and the formality of the occasion had relaxed, Mrs. Swanson found a sudden change in the personnel of her "line." As the ladies stepped aside, preparing to say good-by to their hostess, their husbands, Maj. Gen. Holcomb, Admiral Leahy and Rear Admiral Andrews lined up in their places and called attention to the fact they were ready to continue the party.

Gen. Louis Little was also there with Mrs. Little, who was among those assisting, and many other high ranking members of the Navy and Marine Corps were among the guests. A great silver bowl in the hallway, filled to the top with cards, attested the number who had called during the afternoon.

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Close were talking with Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol on the way downstairs as they were leaving the Swanson's. Mrs. Close and Mrs. Bristol were among those assisting as was Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, who was accompanied by Mr. Ellis and her sister, Miss Louella Chase. Another who assisted was Mrs. Loren B. Johnson who, earlier in the day, had been on grand jury duty—her first experience in such a capacity. Mrs. Swanson's son, Mr. Douglas Hall, was doing his part to see that the guests enjoyed themselves.

Assist at Tea Table.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

A jaunt up Connecticut avenue certainly brings forth a parade of acquaintances. At Dupont Circle, who should be pausing in front of the sidewalk flower stand (you know, where the Mallard duck hangs out), cane and gloves in hand and a posie in his lapel, but the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos. He, who always has a smile for a friend, was merrily laughing over something the young lady with him had just said.

As we proceeded on our way around the circle as far as the Leiter mansion we came upon Mrs. William Jennings Price just as she was crossing the street. She was in brown with a becoming hat of olive green trimmed with what, to our eyes, looked like a garnet-colored feather.

Continuing on our "spotting" stroll, we saw Mrs. Ednass Wilkins, who makes her home with the Director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross. She had on one of the smartest black outfits we have seen. The coat was seal-skin and her hat, with its brim cocked up on the left side and down on the right, was of hatter's plush of which top hats are made.

Little Laura Recinos, daughter of the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, wearing vermillion crepe with black hat and accessories, was having luncheon at Pierre's with Mrs. Frank Harlow Weller (Amelita Alfaro), and two other young ladies, whose faces we could not see. Amelita was in gray. Her frock was of satin crepe and her hat of a light gray heather felt had a medium brim and perky quill pointing skyward.

Gracious, just when we were lamenting the fact that the debutante season had died its annual death, along comes a sudden spurt of life in the invitation from Ruth Dunlop for a party Saturday afternoon in honor of Gertie Pearson.

Speaking of parties, Van Buren DeVries has issued invitations for a cocktail party at which he is to be host on Sunday afternoon January 24.

In her various travels about the world, she has had many experiences with librarians in the different lands. She finds this one best of all—ready to provide any book for which she asks with an ease and promptness by which she has been amazed.

Saw Emiscah Davis dancing in the Shoreham One to Two Club. She had on a plain little frock of tangerine crepe. Her hat and coat she had discarded. Her simple coiffure is most becoming. She is wearing her light-brown wavy hair demurely parted in the center and brushed back from a serene brow.

Betty Beale in a sophisticated straight line gown of dark blue, with her hair waved and curled in an utterly different manner and looking ever so much like Ina Claire.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Youth Indignant Because His Best Girl Insists On Keeping Watch Another Man Gave Her.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with one girl for the past seven months and I am crazy about her. Before Christmas I asked her what she wanted me to give her, knowing she had other boy friends, and not wanting to give her something which one of the other admirers might duplicate. She promised me that in case she got two gifts alike she would keep mine and return the other.

* * * *

I gave her a wristwatch, and learned only a few days ago that she also received a wristwatch from another boy, and one which was very much like the one I gave her. After I confronted her with the evidence which proved I knew she had two wristwatches (which fact I discovered accidentally, as I was not prying into her affairs), she defended herself by saying the other boy's watch didn't mean anything to her, that she had not worn it, and that she would return it if I wanted her to.

* * * *

But now she says she cannot return it, as the boy's feelings would be hurt too badly. Yet she doesn't seem to mind hurting my feelings by going back on her promise to me. She says, furthermore, that the other boy can help her get a job when she finishes school and that she cannot afford to make him mad. Am I old-fashioned or obstinate in insisting that she return the other watch? If she continues to refuse, should I ask her to return mine? I am miserably awaiting your advice and will watch your column in The Post for a solution. B. B...

* * * *

Low Brow Squabble.

DEAR B. B.: What the girl should do, of course, is throw your wristwatch at your head and tell you to get out and stay out. I never heard of anything so crass as giving a girl a Christmas gift with all sorts of qualifying strings attached to it. I marvel at her patience—or is it spinelessness?—in tolerating your outrageous and unwarranted meddling in her strictly personal and private relationships with others. Her mistake was not so much in refusing to return the other boy's wristwatch as in promising you in the first place that she would return any gift which duplicated the one you might choose for her.

* * * *

What you have given her as a token of your presumable esteem is her property, to do with as she sees fit; and the same goes for any other gifts she may have received from other boy friends. Don't dignify your attitude by calling it either old-fashioned or obstinate. It is, rather, ill-bred and petty.

* * * *

However, when a girl begins choosing and hanging on to boy friends for reasons of expediency, and particularly when she lets down the bars of good taste to accept gifts of a type and value which should never be accepted, I suppose she can expect to find herself in the mazes of just such a vulgar confusion as this. A girl with thoroughbred instincts would not bargain with a man over a proposed gift, in the first place; nor would she accept from a man friend any jewelry, or any gift representing the cash value of a good wrist watch, in the second place, and she would recoil in shuddering distaste from further association with a man who dares assume a dictatorial attitude in her affairs as a result of having made her any gift whatsoever.

* * * *

Since neither of you seem overly sensitive in your social interchange, I suppose you might as well even the account by demanding back your precious watch. I should count the girl well rid of both it and you; and I think it quite possible you may elsewhere find rather less material minded companionship than she seems to supply. M. H.

A Broken Engagement.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For five years I have been engaged to marry a man who has been very attentive to me during most of those years. He has showered me with flowers and gifts and has taken me to dinners, shows and night clubs. During recent months, however, there have been fewer flowers and diminishing attention. Now he informs me he is not sure of his love for me, does not wish to see me for two months, and that at the end of that time I may telephone him.

* * * *

What would be your reaction to this? Shall I telephone him at the end of two months, or shall I endeavor to put him out of my life? Or do you think he is already out of my life? And is this merely his way of telling me so?
Sincerely, LOUISE.

* * * *

DEAR LOUISE: The only way to handle this situation is to let the young man go without a quiver, while giving him to understand you haven't the faintest intention of telephoning him at the end of two months, or ever, for that matter. Return his ring and tell him he is free as air, so far as you are concerned. If you have an assortment of sizeable or expensive gifts which he has given you, return them also. Say that you want him to feel entirely free while he is probing his emotions to discover the true nature of his regard for you.

* * * *

Complete acquiescence with his tentative gestures toward release from the engagement will do more to clarify his mind than the most eloquent pleading. It is impossible for anyone, even the man himself, to say with certainty just now whether or not his love is dead. But the sane, practical and saving thing for you to do is to assume that it is dead and to act accordingly. I have known more than one instance where a bored suitor has been quickened into a second and vastly more appreciative regard for his best girl by her letting him go without protest when he expressed a desire to break off a romance. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Simpson Case Puts Baltimore Women Out in Limelight

Baltimore (AP). — Mrs. Wally Simpson may be slipping from the front pages, but Baltimore girls seem to be right in the midst of "cashing in" in a big way on the reputation for charm she gave her home city.

Attractive Mary Spotswood Warren, young editor of the Blue Book of Baltimore society, has returned from New York with accounts of how "the stock of Baltimore girls has gone up about 100 per cent" because of the woman for whom a King gave up his throne.

"Even in that sophisticated city," said Miss Warren, "everybody speaks of Baltimore girls, charm and Mrs. Simpson in one breath and in a big way. At first, I though they were joking. But not at all. I heard it too many times, from too many people."

Her friends also have noticed the same thing—have been "almost overwhelmed by it," she related.

Bright Linens Bring Cheer to Breakfast

The quickly growing fad for color in linens brings a breakfast set of plain color with bright stripes around its edges. This cloth will brighten up your entire room, as well as the meal. It is practical and attractive enough to be left on the table between meals.

Color Note Predominates New Linens

Bright Tones Now Used to Supplement Home Decorations.

By Rebekah Blake.

COLOR which has invaded everything from interior decorating to men's clothes is making further inroads on household linens. This is particularly evidenced in the annual January purchasing of household supplies.

While white sheets, tablecloths and towels still are going strong in the "white sales," many housewives are using colored linens to supplant their home decorating schemes.

Bath towels are more colorful than ever before. Unless you have a bathroom with colored tiling, in which case you will probably select white towels, you will want the new brightly colored ones with stripes and bold geometric patterns. Women prefer dainty shades of blue, peach and Nile green. Sand, Dubonnet, brown and gray are the desired shades for the men. Towels, especially for show, are monogrammed. It is smart to have the monograms on your towels match your husband's and vice versa. The new towels are woven in pattern especially designed for monograms. The type of letters used in the monograms should correspond with the type of bathroom. The colors, too, should correspond with the room.

Remember that a good bath towel is one that will create friction and at the same time be absorbent. There are new Turkish rub-down towels with linen loops running through them that are wonderful circulation stimulators.

Probably because of the colorful pottery now in vogue, gay breakfast sets are popular and just the thing. Their colors add a cheery atmosphere. You may find them in crash linens in rust, yellow and brown, red, white and blue, green and yellow combinations and in stripes, plaids and flowered designs. Some cloths have happy phrases written on them, as "Good Morning."

Luncheon cloths may be bright but for the most part are more dainty or of more subtle hue than breakfast cloths. Cutwork cloths and Chinese grass linen luncheon sets are especially popular. A dusty, deep blue cloth with white china and glistening silver and a bright centerpiece is fresh and clean looking for a winter luncheon. Some sets have tiny clusters of flowers embroidered at intervals. Others have a large basket of flowers in the center and old-fashioned bouquets in the corners. Still others have large flowers as tulips and poppies with long stems and leaves.

Imaginations of designers were let completely loose on cocktail and tea napkins. These may be of white linen embroidered in white or they may have colorful cocks stitched in the corners. One interesting cocktail napkin has "Return to Betty and Bob" (or whatever the owners' names may be) inscribed in the corner. This is especially for the guest who often mistakes the napkin for his handkerchief and pokes it in a pocket.

Large dinner cloths are not as much used now as they have been in times past. This is due to the informal entertaining that is fast replacing formal dinners. However, many are being sold, especially in a rayon damask cloth which is lively and reflects the lights in its shimmery sheen. An attractive one in platinum shade is shown in a local department store. Tall candles in a Dubonnet shade are used with it. In purchasing such a cloth with a fanciful weave, remember the china that is to be used with it and get a design that will harmonize with the dinner ware.

Toweling, Napkins Add Smart Touch to Any Furnishing Scheme.

Lace tablecloths were formerly used only as between-meal cloths, but now they are often put into real service, especially for buffet suppers.

For informal entertaining, colorful linen and pottery is even used for supper, but never fear, white is still popular and in good taste.

Kitchen linen it not to be outdone. There are new dish towels of part linen for absorbency and part cotton for economy, that will liven up your daily drudge, and they are guaranteed not to leave lint on the dishes.

Hand-blocked linen dish towels are colorful and a joy to work with, but perhaps expensive for everyday use. Also, there are new towels especially attractive for drying cocktail glasses. The name of the cocktail as "old-fashioned" is embroidered on one end of the towel with a picture of an old-fashioned girl.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Developmentitis.

Have you ever known a chap who was afflicted with the trouble which we may call developmentitis? It appears frequently in men in the forties or fifties to whom life has been kinder than the victim had a right to expect. A plethora of food, combined with little exercise, has resulted in a condition of soft muscles fishlike in consistency.

Suddenly our friend awakens to the true state of affairs. He looks at himself in the glass, catches sight of his abdominal profile, and is utterly unable to discover the whereabouts of his aforetime substantial bicepts. Fired with determination to apply remedial measures, he consults the physical director at the club and enrolls in a "development" class.

He must rise at 6 o'clock in the morning and take a cold shower folowed by a brisk rubdown with a rough Turkish towel. After donning a sprint suit he is to dogtrot for 15 minutes, circling the clothes posts in the back yard or going four times around the block. It is expected that when he returns to the house—puffing and blowing—he will be ready to drop. Nevertheless he must strip "pronto" and take a shower followed by an anointing with alcohol.

Then comes half an hour of calesthenics. Lying on the floor, he raises one leg after the other as high as possible, later rolling over and over (he must do this with the head raised, otherwise concussion is imminent). After shaving he may breakfast even though he is too tired to eat, which fact, of course, he must disregard. He then walks to work—not less than five miles.

Before lunch he reports at the gymnasium for half an hour's swim—active exercise, mind you, no floating, which is climaxed by another rubdown by a 240-pound masseur. After lunch he is allowed to return to the office, but must report back not later than half past four for a Turkish bath, with some more massage as a frosting for his exercise cake. At half past five he joins "the boys" of the class and is put through a regime of marching and countermarching, jumping through hoops, rope-skipping, workout with the weight, dumb bells, and Indian clubs, winding up with ten minutes on the rowing machine. He is then instructed to walk home—the same five long miles—where he arrives in a hilarious state of enthusiasm. Although he has little appetite for dinner he feels that he must eat, wondering meanwhile why he has indigestion. Following instructions, he repairs to his "solitary" about 10 p. m. to enjoy a final hour of calesthenics—more rolling and leg lifting.

CHILD CHATS

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"WHAT shall I do next?"

The nursery was full of toys of every kind, and yet Tertius was never satisfied. He always wanted something more, something new to relieve his boredom. Then, after a few minutes of playing with the new toy, he was tired of it. The truth is that the child was satiated. Novelty had lost its novelty.

Many toys are not good for any child. If adoring friends and relatives wish to shower gifts upon him, it is a good idea to persuade them to make the gifts practical—clothes or money for the savings bank—or to permit the presents to be put away for some later day when the current stock is low.

Of course, there are toys, such as blocks, of which a child cannot have too many. The more blocks, the more time and imagination can be expended on the work of building. Anything which makes the child work and use his ingenuity and imagination can not harm him.

A child who has few toys but plenty of raw material is never bored. He had far rather make his own gadgets and enjoy the triumph and satisfaction of achievement. He is the pioneer in embryo, faced with an unknown world from which he must wrest his needs.

Whenever there comes the whine, "What is there to do?" it is pretty certain that the child has too much, not too little, and the answer is to occupy his hands.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 13.

AS YOU CAN probably imagine, some thousands of hungry blondes (not to mention redheads and the darker shades) are gnashing their pearly teeth in helpless rage over the recent decision of the appellate court of this State outlawing for all time the sort of legal thievery known as "the breach of promise suit," which has always been as popular as the swim suit, and even the ski suit.

ALICE HUGHES.

It is quite possible, at the same time, that many thousands of eager old daddies are growing friskier by the hour, as this law also forbids such matters as the good old "alienation of affections" trick. I may jest, but this is a very serious matter, for in among the larcenies perpetrated by some of the more menacing members of our sex there is always a certain percentage of girls who have really been done wrong. If the new decision sticks, as seems quite likely, where are they to turn for redress from the Gay Deceivers?

Yet the State of New York has produced its Joan of Arc in this great cause. Miss Catherine Fearon of our town, and her learned counsel, are determined to see if the higher court can get away with this, and are pressing their $25,000 damage suit against a gentleman who, it is charged, left Miss Fearon at the very portal of the sacred edifice, her trousseau bought and her job abandoned. Thus in the case of Fearon versus Treanor hangs the fate of New York's deserted, fooled or tricked maidens—as well as the fate of those alert ladies who think to shake down some ardent old papa by due process of law.

This law was introduced and passed to protect the poor males of our State from the depredations of conniving women. But there is much to be said, Miss Fearon feels, for those who are really put upon and suffer a fate less than death but certainly worse than mayhem. Millions watch and wait!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Bustling Broadway the other day, I rubbed my old eyes hard and looked again, but it was really Pauline Frederick, yesterday's glamor girl, and looking very handsome in the mid-fifties. She tells me she is to play the Empress of Austria in the New Theater Guild play, "The Masque of Kings." And Polly, believe me, will look every inch a queen! . . .

Sonja Henie, the blonde skating cutie, has finally departed our shops and night life for a tour of the bigger cities—to skate and help promote her first movie. She and handsome Tyrone Power were a twosome to the last.

* * * *

I got my biggest chuckle from Broadway when I heard that a standee at "You Can't Take It With You," the comedy smash, laughed so hard he fell out an exit door of the Booth Theater into the alley. I didn't see it, but even if it isn't true it's a great idea, being an improvement on "rolling 'em into the aisles" . . .

* * * *

Tied to midtown New York, I always think of it as a soulless mass of stone and steel peopled by so-called humans, and then my police-reporter friend tells me that in one day, in Brooklyn, the harassed officer, Louis Robinson, of our police force, did his duty by running four cows off one street, and then catching a stray sheep and returning it to the home of Olga Savosh, its owner. Gotham is all things to all people—especially to cops!

* * * *

And the homey note is struck when I see the socially prominent "Pete" Wideners, 2nd, strolling along Fifth Avenue on a clear, cold afternoon with their brown dachshund strictly on a leash. I am always tempted to gift him liver . . .

* * * *

Our city kids, as well as their elders but not much better, are often driven slug-nutty by the ceaseless racket of the town. Oswald Schlockow, one of the assistant superintendents of schools, tells me he is recommending that periods in school be set aside each day for the kids to listen to relaxing and soothing music, as an antidote for taxi-roars and elevated rumbles—and not a bad notion, either.

* * * *

Two interesting style notes just snatched. Half-and-half dresses, involving the dramatic use of two kinds of fabric, are in again. Lelong uses velvet and faille. And, of all things!—if the shirtwaist dress isn't again a part of the fashion picture, on the say-so of Molyneux and Mainbocher.

Golden Red Locks Have Vogue; 'Bleached Blondes' Are Passe

Expert on Tinting Says Hair Should Brighten Personality, Also Match Complexion; Believes Grayheads Face Handicap in Business World.

By Ethel Ehlen,

"BRIGHTEN your hair and you brighten your personality" advises Anada Dumas, authority on hair tinting, who is in Washington this week.

All-black costumes and dull-drab hair present a rather dreary picture, believes Miss Dumas. And gray hair, she thinks, handicaps a woman in the business world. She reports that both drab-heads and grayheads are resorting increasingly to artifice to achieve chic and youthful coiffures. The color most in vogue now among women who go in for hair-tinting is golden red.

"Women in the business world," said Miss Dumas, "following the dictates of modern methods, must not only be chic looking, intelligent and diplomatic, but must possess the qualities of youth. For important positions they are hired with the expectation they will continue in the business world a number of years. Gray hair immediately puts the employer on the defensive and the result often is that the applicant does not get the job, regardless of her qualifications and experience. It is all wrong perhaps, but that is the way it is in the modern world of business.

Should Match Complexion.

"There was formerly a stigma attached to women who dared to change the color of their hair, a silly idea, caused by convention custom and the like. With the famous stars of the screen changing their hair-color about as often as they change their costumes, this notion has been done away with, and fastidious women are following their example."

There is no reason, maintains Miss Dumas, to be horror-stricken by the thought of changing hair from gray to honey blonde or brownette, when complexions and fingernails are constantly in the process of change of color theme. One idea is as consistent as the other, and both in accord with contemporary feminine fashion claims this expert. In hair-tinting, she says, the important thing is to match the complexion.

"Smart women are tinting their hair a golden red," according to Miss Dumas, and this warm tone is generally becoming to persons of all ages and complexions. Bleached blondes have passed out of the fashion scene entirely. The present vogue for dark face powder and natural-looking complexions make bright-looking hair imperative. Older women should not go in for red hair however, she points out, as it hardens the features and often presents a garish rather than a smart appearance. Bright and drab tints are the best tones for women in this classification.

Advises Short Hair. . .

Hair is still woman's crowning glory, contends Miss Dumas, but the modern trend is to wear as small a crown as possible. "Long hair is aging—it usually looks frowzy; that is, longish bobbed hair," she said. "Long hair floating around the face and shoulders, always reminds me of the same incongruity as a woman who is size 12, for instance, wearing a dress about size 20. The material may be lovely, but there is too much of it."

With the sleek coiffures and hats which expose them, it is more necessary than ever before, this authority explained, to possess hair which is shiny and of good color. "Brushing is an excellent way to promote health and sheen to hair; brushing upward to exercise the roots," she explained. "After brushing the hair thoroughly at night, comb the waves back into place, cover with a net and in the morning the coiffure will need very little attention. Exercising the scalp with the fingertips in a rotary motion is another new-old idea which is inductive to healthful hair. Hair which is properly waved and permanented will not lose the wave by strenuous brushing."

CAPITAL MANNERS

Formal Dinner Often Confuses Newcomers to Washington Society; Dress Is More Elaborate but Usual Dining Procedure Is Observed

By Margaret Wallace.

EVER SEASON brings many persons to Washington who are not versed in entertaining and yet who are expected to take part in the formal social life of the Capital. Some of the problems confronted by such arrivals are raised in the following letter:

"Deal Miss Wallace: My husband, my young daughter and myself have been invited to a formal dinner at the home of an official from our home State. We have never been to a really formal dinner such as an official hostess would give in Washington. I wish you would help us. What kind of clothes should we wear? What do we do when we arrive at the house? Do the three of us remain together all evening? When should we leave? I am not sure the host and hostess will recognize us when we arrive, as we have not seen them very often. Should we tell our names or wait for them to ask us? I am so nervous about this invitation that I would send regrets if my husband would consent. Would it be proper to do so? The official is my husband's chief. My husband says that we will have to learn to go out to formal dinners, as he has heard that other persons are going to invite us. My husband is very handsome and distinguished looking and a very brilliant man. My daughter is well educated and pretty."

NEW COMER.

ANSWER: It would be proper but not advisable to send regrets to this invitation. A formal dinner is very much like any other kind of a dinner. You wear formal dinner clothes. That in Washington means evening gowns of very formal dinner-dress for the women and full dress for the men. For a less formal dinner, dinner dresses for the women and tuxedos for the men are proper.

When you arrive at the home for dinner you will doubtless be shown to a room to leave your wraps by a servant. Usually there is a separate cloakroom for the men. Your husband should wait near the door of the drawing room until you and your daughter join him. Then you go into the drawing room to be received by your host and hostess. Usually at a formal dinner the host and hostess receive near the drawing room door and there is someone to announce you. If there is not, your husband should announce himself to the hostess and then introduce you and your daughter. If the host and hostess are not standing at the drawing room door, you and your husband and daughter should go where they are to be received.

You should not remain together all evening. You should engage in conversation with the other guests whether you are introduced or not. You will each have a dinner partner and probably will not be placed near each other at the table. The dinner partner will be designated to your husband by the host or hostess, who will present him to the lady he is to escort to the dinner table. The gentlemen who are to be dinner partners of yourself and daughter will also be presented.

The time for leaving a dinner party depends on circumstances and the plans the hostess has made for the entertinment of her guests. It is the rule that the guest of honor or ranking guests leave first. That is a signal for the other guests to take their leave.

Free Library Being Planned At Alexandria

City Council and Citizens Reach Agreement on Site and Upkeep.

The Alexandria Library Association, which was formed on July 24, 1794, and has been in existence continuously since that date, has entered into a tentative agreement with the city council of Alexandria, Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett, Albert Stabler and others, representing the trustees of the Friends Burying Ground, for the establishment of a free library in the city.

The library, a subscription one, has been housed in Lee Camp Hall, 806 Prince street, for many years past, and kept up by the subscriptions and from time to time donations and bequests. It now has over 9,000 volumes, several thousand of them priceless, and an endowment fund of $7,500. This fund will be applied to the purchase of proper library equipment.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett recently offered to erect a building suited to library needs, at a site in the city convenient to the largest number of citizens. It is estimated such a building will cost around $15,000, and it will be given in memory of Dr. Barrett's mother, the late Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, who was national president of the Florence Crittendon Mission, and the second national president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The old Friends Burying Ground on the north side of the 700 block of Queen street, in which Dr. Elisha Cullen Dick, physician to Gen. Washington, and many other notable pioneer Alexandrians, are buried, is centrally located and has long been in a state of neglect. According to the Friends custom, the graves were not raised and tablets were placed in the brick wall surrounding the lot, in commemoration of those buried there, consequently the exact spot of the grave of Dr. Dick has long been a matter of discussion. A library on this site will in a measure carry out the idea of a permanent memorial to this colonial character, and tablets will be placed for the known dead in the old lot.

The City of Alexandria is to appropriate $5,000 annually for the maintenance of the library. Detailed plans are to be perfected by the library committee of council, A. Slater Lamond, Louis C. Barley and John D. Matter, and the library association representatives, with Dr. and Mrs. Barrett.

Four Plead 'Ignorance' to Money Intricacies in High Finance.

New York, Jan. 13.—Four complaining witnesses called at the opening of a stockholders' suit running into millions of dollars and dealing with the intricacies of high finance pleaded ignorance of the issues today when they were asked if they knew what the action was about.

The suit, demanding an accounting covering alleged losses totaling $80,000,000 and recovery of $20,500,000 from Henry L. Doherty, the Cities Service Co., the Cities Service Securities Corporation, the H. L. Doherty & Co., Inc., and officers and directors of the Cities Service Co., was brought by a minority group of stockholders representing 840 shares.

P. E. Jackson, counsel for the plaintiffs, reviewed the activities of the Cities Service system from its organization in 1910, and charged that Doherty handled billions of dollars of investors' money without accounting for it except to "dummy" officers and directors.

He said the suit was based on two causes of action, the first alleging that Doherty sold personal stock for $20,500,00 which, he asserted, should have been turned over to Cities Service Co. for the benefit of all stockholders.

The second cause of action, he said, "goes into a mass of details involving intricate financial transactions—many of which I do not understand and which the Federal Trade Commission, with its army of employes, could not understand."

Lillian M. Kampe, one of the four witnesses heard today, said her understanding of the bill of complaint was "something about the stockholders not being treated right."

Have you lips that make good Resolutions? [and a chin with the firmness to keep them?]
"Ambitious" Lips
Upper and lower lips equally developed, but the upper lip characterized by its exceptional length. Although the lips are by no means thin, yet firm, muscular control prevents them from drooping or "bagging." Lower lip inclined to protrude to a slight degree. Lips suggestive of a progressive type with initiative and ambition.
"Resolute" Jaw
Jaw, big-boned and with decided forward thrust. Conspicuous for width immediately above the chin. Jowls well developed with rolls of firm tissue. A jaw to be distinguished from the square "lantern" jaw of stubbornness, and associated rather with calm strength and steadfast will-power.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Reorganization.

One thought kept buzzing through our heads while reading the report of the President's Committee on Administrative Management, and that was, "Are the American people ready for such changes?"

For example, the Brownlow committee recommends that the present bi-partisan Civil Service Commission be scrapped in favor of a single responsible administrator with a non-partisan board of seven citizens to serve as a watchdog. This change from bi-partisan to a non-partisan board may seem merely a matter of detail, yet to us it represented a fundamental difference in outlook.

The bi-partisan commission is rooted in our two party political system; on what political forms would the non-partisan commission rest?

More and more as we read the report we found ourselves recalling the sage remark of M. L. Wilson, Undersecretary of Agriculture, that the first essential of reform is to change the people's pattern of thinking. We couldn't help wondering whether the thinking processes of the American people are receptive to such an earthquake-like overhauling of our governmental structure.

Pickets.

If you're interested in those seamen pickets stalking up and down in front of the Commerce Building, we can tell you something about them.

The "gang"—that's how the pickets refer to themselves—leave Baltimore every morning at 8 o'clock and are driven to town in a special truck. Actual picketing starts at 10 a. m. sharp and continues until 4 p. m. in the afternoon—6 hours is considered a full day's work for a picket.

There is no knocking off for lunch. The "gang" has a captain and it is up to him to rustle up sandwiches and coffee for the men at noon-time. Sometimes the captain gives the men one sandwich apiece, sometimes two—the quantity and quality of the food, one picket told us, depends on "what connections the captain makes."

Thus far, the same seamen have have been serving as pickets but towards the end of the week, when the "great protest march" on the Capitol is scheduled, there will be a shift in picket personnel. The picket "gang" captain seemed to fear considerable rivalry among the seamen as to who will do the picketing. Usually when seamen picket they have to gaze out on a bleak water-front, the captain explained. The architectural splendor of the Commerce Building has been such a pleasent change, the captain said, that the pickets have been completely won over.

Your Diaryist doesn't want to butt in with advice to Clifford Lanham on how to get rid of those starlings, but if Lanham is really serious about wanting to kill the pesky birds, William R. Maxon, of Smithsonian can tell him just how to do it.

Relief Maps.

A new method of making relief maps has been invented by John J. Braund of Cost and Geodetic Survey, and if the machine is all Braund says it is, mapmakers should be beating a path to his door.

Relief-mapping in the traditional manner, Braund explained, is a laborious process—elevations have to be built up in successive layers and then, the locations and identifications have to be printed on tissue, cut up into small strips and placed over the map surface.

Braund's machine does both jobs—the relief features are etched into a soft aluminum plate with a specially controlled needle, and the additional map details are transferred to the plate as if printed. Braund also has patented a machine for duplicating these relief maps and claims he can turn them out five times as fast as with any other method known. Last summer Braund bid on a Soil Conservation Service job and got the contract for $600, the other bids running into the thousands of dollars.

As Board of Trade Met

Representative Sam Rayburn, House majority leader, and Edgar Morris, president of Washington Board of Trade, right, at the board's meeting last night.

Congress Has D. C. Interests At Heart, Trade Board Is Told

Two members of Congress, Representative Sam Rayburn, majority leader of the House, and Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, emphasized the great interest of both houses in the affairs of the District when they spoke last night as guests of the Washington Board of Trade at the Mayflower Hotel.

Rayburn asserted that the Administration wishes to deal fairly with the city and added that it is his belief that every member of the House took upon himself the responsibilities of the District Commissioners.

Thomas told the group that he wanted every Washington resident to feel free to take grievances to Capitol Hill.

To Insure Buying Power.

Congress and the Administration, said Representative Rayburn, are determined to institute a recovery program to assure adequate buying power for every citizen of the Nation.

Saying that U. S. ports must be kept open to world commerce, Rayburn declared that Pan-America offers a ripe field for this country's trade. The President's trip to South America, he said, may cause an understanding that will resound to the benefit of American business.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the District Committee, declared that he was opposed to excessive real estate taxes in the District. Such taxes, he said, tended to discourage home ownership.

Senator King expressed the desire to give the District the exact kind of government that its residents show they want.

Tribute to Wilson.

Paying tribute to Woodrow Wilson, he said that if the United States had entered the League of Nations it would have acted as a powerful agent for peace. The membership of the United States, he declared, would have kept other countries from leaving the League.

R. J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Board of Trade, reported the Greater National Capital Committee's plans for caring for the influx of visitors during Inauguration.

Plans for the President's birthday ball, to be held January 30, were announced by District Commissioner Melvin Hazen. Among the other speakers was Constantine Brown, of the Washington Star.

Bates Is Slated To Fill Vacancy On Committee

The House District Committee, whose chairman always has carried the unofficial title of "Mayor of Washington," will get an honest-to-goodness mayor today when the Republicans announce their committee assignments.

Representative George Joseph Bates, who is still Mayor of Salem, Mass., is slated to be named to the only minority vacancy on the District Committee.

Bates, who has the reputation of an authority on municipal finance and administration in his home State, has been Mayor of Salem for 13 years, and his term has one more year to run.

Bates Is Commuter.

Because the Salem government formally petitioned him to serve out his term, Bates commutes between Salem and Washington every week-end, and will continue to do so throughout this session. He agreed to retain the city job but to accept no salary.

"It's going to be hard work," he agreed, "but the government of Salem is so well organized that I can supervise all of its week's activities on Friday and Saturday."

The Salem Mayor will be a welcome addition to the District Committee at this time because of the approaching inquiry on municipal reorganization and new taxation. He doubtless will be appointed to one of the sub-committees to be named by Chairman Mary T. Norton.

Meeting Set for Monday.

An organization meeting of the District Committee was scheduled tentatively for Monday by Mrs. Norton after four new Democratic members have been added yesterday.

The new members, all serving their first term in Congress, are Representative Arnold, of Illinois; Bigelow, of Ohio; Sacks, of Pennsylvania, and Allen, of Delaware.

The four new Democrats replace two members who were transferred to other committees, Representatives Patman, of Texas, and Ellenbogen, of Pennsylvania, and two members not re-elected, Werner, of South Dakota, and Carpenter, of Kansas.

Democratic members who remain on the committee, besides Mrs. Norton, are: Palmisano, of Maryland, Kennedy, of Maryland, Randolph, of West Virginia, Jenckes, of Indiana, Schulte, of Indiana, Wood, of Missouri, Quinn, of Pennsylvania, Nichols, of Oklahoma, and McGehee, of Mississippi.

Although the membership of the House Appropriations Committee was completed yesterday, Chairman Buchanan withheld sub-committee assignments. He declined to predict who may be chairman of the District sub-committee.

Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, was added to the majority list. He has been mentioned for the District chairmanship, but he is said to be angling for the War Department sub-committee post.

Blanton's Son Ousted As House Tally Clerk

John Blanton, son of former Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, yesterday was ousted from his job as assistant tally clerk of the House by the Democratic Patronage Committee.

Young Blanton has held the job for the last four years. His successor was not named, but it was said that a new member of Congress will be given the opportunity to fill the post.

New D. C. Jail Is Advocated By Cummings

Building to House 600 Prisoners Proposed for Blue Plains.

Striking at the antiquated District Jail as an institution "in which we can take no special pride," Attorney General Homer S. Cummings yesterday urged construction of a new and modern building at Blue Plains, D. C., to house approximately 600 prisoners.

But at the same time—in a letter to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen—he said condition of the present structure does not warrant its abandonment. He suggested the institution could be improved for use in relieving overcrowded quarters at the Lorton Reformatory and Workhouse at Occoquan, Va.

The Attorney General's recommendations followed a recent personal inspection tour of the jail. And even more recently, he conferred with Commissioner Hazen, Sanford Bates, Federal Director of Prisons and Elwood Street, director of Public Welfare for the District, on congestion and other problems at the jail.

More Than 60 Years Old.

Describing the jail and its timeworn facilities, Cummings said:

"Dating from 1876, the institution can not be classed as a modern jail building. Its facilities do not reflect modern penological ideas.

"The problem, as I view it," Cummings continued, "is larger than merely a jail problem. It involves the other penal institutions of the District, at Lorton and Occoquan, both of which are badly overcrowded.

"While the jail itself is old and had many features that are inconvenient, it is not in such bad condition as to justify its abandonment. Its average population could be reduced by providing suitable quarters elsewhere for a substantial number of its inmates."

Pointing out that certain improvements could be made at the jail without great expense, Cummings said he was opposed to construction of additions to the building as recently proposed in plans submitted to Commissioner Hazen by Capt. H. S. Bishop, assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Capt. Bishop presented alternative plans for enlargement and alterations to the jail, together with proposals for construction of a new institution.

Paramount among improvements recommended by Cummings was elimination of the dining hall as an execution chamber. A new and separate death house should be established, he said.

"I believe changes could be made without building additions to the existing structure," Cummings declared. "For manifest reasons, it would be inadvisable to extend the facilities at Occoquan and Lorton as a method of relief from overcrowding at the District Jail.

New Structure Advised.

"A much more practical solution would be to erect, on available land, or on land that could be purchased for a reasonable sum, at Blue Plains, D. C., a new structure to house 600 prisoners on a medium security basis and that might be built, exclusive of land, for a cost in the neighborhood of $750,000.

"It might well house inmates sentenced to short terms as well as those awaiting trial," Cummings said. "If population of the jail could be reduced by about 150 it would leave a margin of about 450 inmates who thereafter need not be committed to Occoquan or Lorton. Furthermore, with overcrowding remedied, additional facilities would be afforded for classification and segregation of inmates."

In his plans for a new structure, Cap. Bishop estimated the total cost at $2,000,000 for a building to house 1,000 prisoners.

Trying to Record Suzy's Wails for a Mate

Taxicab Strike Halted as Rate Boost Is Denied

Approximately 500 taxicab drivers who went on strike at 1 a. m. yesterday were back at work today after pleas to increase rates in the District were denied by the Public Utilities Commission. A meeting to discuss another strike has been called for tomorrow night.

A delegation of seven, members of the strikers executive committee, called on the P. U C., in an attempt to "immediately better conditions." They were told by Chairman Riley Elgen that a formal demand would have to be made after a hearing which could not be called for 20 days.

A meeting was called at the Columbia Typographical Temple, to decide upon further action.

For several hours speakers outlined the conditions under which drivers work. Almost every man who took the floor said: "I do not want to cause President Roosevelt any trouble at his inaugural."

One speaker, Edward Williams, colored hacker, of the Lincoln Cab Association, became so worked up in his plea for "a decent living" that he sobbed as he talked.

After nearly three hours, in which all the rules of parliamentary procedure were broken, a decision to abandon the strike was made.

An impromptu affair, the strike move was made in a few hours. Through handbills, cab drivers were notified of a meeting to be held at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday. After adjournment of the meeting which lasted two and a half hours another was called for 1 a. m. Wednesday. At this gathering, the decision to strike was made.

Taken by surprise the police department immediately canceled all leave against possibility of trouble arising among the striking cab men.

This action, however, proved unnecessary. But nine drivers were booked by police for disorderly conduct. Several cases of passengers being forced to vacate cabs also were reported.

Suzy Forgets All About Beaus When Well-Wishers Try to Aid

With tolerant boredom, Suzy, an attractive young red-haired orang utan, watched newsmen and publicity men going through some strange monkeyshines at the Zoo yesterday.

The homo sapiens were conspiring to get her a boy friend via phonograph records, a new wrinkle in love notes which may in time become the approved method of correspondence between lovelorn anthropoids.

The fact that Suzy may wish to remain unwed was not given any consideration by the wingless cupids who were doing their darndest to get her a beau. These busybodies went into her cage and set up electric recording devices, wires, microphones, etc., and intend (they say) to send the recordings of her "love bleats" to Dr. William Mann in Vancouver to take with him to Sumatra. The idea is for Dr. Mann to play the records on a gramophone and lure some orang swain out of the trees and bring said swain back to Suzy.

Forgets Her Problem.

Only a human being could think up anything so bizarre. Suzy seemed to think as she watched the goings-on, hanging by feet and hands from the iron bars of her cage. She was so amused with their antics she forgot all about beaux and wouldn't utter a single love call, which was rather embarrassing to the soundman who was making the records. She wouldn't coo, so someone prodded her a little and she emitted what probably is the equivalent of a simian "ouch," but how that will get her a beau not even a publicity man could imagine, and they are very imaginative.

The publicity man (who wants to call attention to a new portable recording device), showed his imaginativeness when he took a chance remark of Dr. Mann the other day that Suzy might like to have a mate and turned it into a story about his machine.

"An idea hit me in a blinding flash," he modestly explained to a dozen newsmen. "I thought of my little recorder. I thought all the genius of modern science should be turned to the aid of this little orang girl. If I could make a record of Suzy's pleas, Dr. Mann would play it in some jungle wilderness, where it might fall upon some sympathetic ear. More than that, I have herewith started the Society for the Discouragement of Family Decline Among the Lower Species."

Head Keeper William Blackburn observed the business with some skepticism. He stated that there are any number of orangutans in Sumatra which could be had for a big red apple. "Just put an apple in a net and the orangs will walk into it," he opined. "There is no need for gramophone records. However, I will admit it's an experiment. Suzy's voice, if she has any, may attract 50 male orangutans. Who can tell? However, so far as we know, Suzy is not and never has been in love. On the other hand, how could she be? She never has met another oranuta. It's a problem."

Advice Is Offered On Social Diseases

States attacking syphilis must consider colored people as the reservoir of the disease, Rear Admiral C. S. Butler, Medical Corps, U. S. N., told students of the Navy Medical School and guests yesterday in a lecture on "Some Observations on Laws."

Said Admiral Butler:

"The high degree of syphilis in natives of the tropics and in the colored population of the United States long has been a matter of medical knowledge.

"From the public health standpoint colored people must be considered the reservoir for syphilis in States attacking this disease. Efforts at eradication therefore should be concentrated upon the weakest link in the chain."

U. S. Agents Study Henry Murder Case

All Police Data Turned Over to Investigators; Reason Is Secret.

Without announcing their motives, Department of Justice agents yesterday began reviewing all police records of the John "Milsie" Henry murder case.

It was the second time the department has taken an interest in the case—the first being after a group of influential Washingtonians, including Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, waged a successful fight to save Charles Harris, sentenced to the electric chair for the slaying.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said the Federal men came to his office in the morning and requested complete records of the police investigation. He gave them all data. They gave no reason for the request, except to say that J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, had ordered the case reviewed.

Slain in Car.

Henry, a gambler and reputedly "finger" man for several crimes in the District, was killed in the early hours of a day in the summer of 1932, as he was getting out of his car on Brown street northwest near his home. The gunman, armed with a shotgun, jumped into a car and was driven off.

Harris was arrested some time after the murder when persons in the neighborhood identified his picture as the man they saw get into the car. He was convicted and sentenced to die. President Roosevelt issued a stay of execution while the Department of Justice could investigate and finally changed the sentence to life imprisonment on the department's recommendation.

Persons who came to Harris' aid contended that in the half light of early morning, positive identification of the fleeing man was doubtful and also pointed to Harris' alibi, sustained by several persons that he was in Philadelphia when the murder was committed.

Examine Death Case.

The Federal agents also examined the shotgun used in the killing and two revolvers, all of which were located in a secret compartment of a car which had been sold at auction to a Gaithersburg, Md., farmer, who found the guns, although police had had the car in their possession for some time prior to its sale.

The shotgun was identified by Police Ballistics Expert Lieut. John H. Fowler as the murder gun. The other weapons, Fowler said, had never been fired. Inspector Thompson recovered the weapons after they had lain in the compartment four years.

When the shotgun was discovered and after Fowler had established it as the murder weapon, police felt their case against Harris was strengthened.

Thompson said yesterday he was willing for the Justice Department to conduct any investigation they wished into the case, which was closed before he was appointed chief of the Detective Bureau.

He said he was satisfied the right man had been convicted.

Bred to Run

By Walter Haight

SYNOPSIS.

A colt is foaled on the Ridgeway Farm. He is given much advice by his mother as he learns to munch grass and test his wobbly legs. The Ridgeways are forced to dispose of their horses at auction and the colt is "thrown in for good measure" when his mother, Battleship Girl, is sold to the Wilmore Farm. Dorothy Holbrook's auto has a flat tire near the fence and she sees the colt frolicking. Later she persuades her father to buy him, identifying the colt by a white ring around his leg. Taken to Holbrook Manor, the colt grows like a weed. He and "Miss Dorothy," as he calls his owner, become fast friends. The colt meets Trainer Jensen and is given early racing education, named "Flat Tire," he starts his racing career and loses his rider at the break. Feels disgraced when not allowed to run next out, but wins his following race. Jensen and his friend, the Cigar Man, win $4,000. Miss Dorothy and her father leave on a world tour. Flat Tire is "out of the money" in two stake races and is sent to the farm for the winter. Jensen, pressed for cash, needs a sure winner. Puts Flat Tire in a claiming race. He wins, but is claimed by "Big Ed" Moreland, tout and gambler. Flat Tire is sold to Arch, a young millionaire, for $5,000. Sets pace at stablemate's wins. "Wolf Tooth" makes him run wide next out. Flat Tire proves he is "muddier" and hears he has been chosen to run in Thanksgiving Handicap. He runs, but is beaten by a nose by his brother. Then follows a round of the Nation's tracks, as he races for Arch's Oakmont Stable. He suffers slight quarter crack and is sent to farm to recuperate. Our hero returns to racing and, after running second, Arch gives him to Bill Cremor-Thachaway, who turns him over to Jacob Herrison, a great trainer. "Flat Tire" is claimed by "Greasy Sam" and shifts from stable to stable over a period of months.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE.

Horses Pass in the Night.

Slicker, last name unknown, was my owner, as I said, when I had a startling experience. He claimed me, using the name of some Baltimore delicatessen keeper for a blind. It was at Havre de Grace that I came into his possession. The beginning was not unusual. Slicker and another man came over to the stall after the race. They looked me over.

"Sound as a dollar, Cap," said Slicker. "Not a blemish on him. This horse can step. He's a lock bet in the right spot."

"You're right," replied the fellow Cap. "This might be the one that's going to put us in the big dough."

That was the usual talk following my claims. Generally, I was examined closely and invariably the new owner was pleased with my appearance. He knew my record, of course.

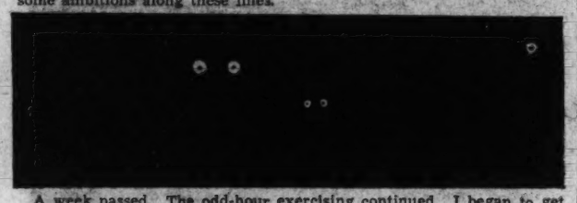
I was stabled in what the horses called "Gyp row." This was the section of the stables where one, and sometimes two stalls were allotted to cheap trainers who were heavy on hopes but light on horses.

I did notice that I was carefully handled and closely watched by some man Slicker assigned to me. This was sort of contrary to the general scheme of things. Usually in these one-horse stables, a stable hand looked out for the whole row at night. The trainers, owners and whoever did the work around the stables took turns watching for one another.

It was all right with me if Slicker thought enough of me to give me a special groom.

One thing I could not understand as the days went by. Why I was walked about the ring for my exercise only just before sunrise or just after sunset? Then again, I was not raced.

Maybe Slicker believed I needed a rest. However, I had won my last two starts. There was no doubt about my good condition. Perhaps Slicker was waiting for a soft spot for me. I wanted to run. My luck in the claiming box hadn't put me in any big stables like Arch's, but there was always a chance. No runny, no claimy—and no claimy, no chance to get in the bigtime again. I still harbored some ambitions along these lines.



A week passed. The odd-hour exercising continued. I began to get a little stall weary.

The horse in the stall on my right was a 4-year old who talked about himself so much that I could hardly get a question in edgewise. I gave up on him, without even asking his name.

On the other side was a gelding, one of the largest horses I ever met. His name was Tiny Tiddle. He warned me not to laugh when he told me. However, when I informed him that my name was Flat Tire, we both gave a loud whinney and kicked the back of our stalls.

He knew nothing about Slicker. The stall had been empty up to the time of my arrival, he said. However, he had heard one of the horsemen say the stall had been reserved for a horse called Stomach Pump.

Well, if Slicker claimed me for a pet, I was satisfied. I was getting good oats and plenty of it. At least I could sleep.

I was dozing when I felt a halter being buckled on my head. I shook myself. A strong arm gripped the halter and held my head high. I heard the stall door creak open. It was pitch dark.

I was fairly thrown out of the stall by this handler. I was too excited and dazed to do anything but go with him. He ran along

'No Sluggin'; Just Huggin'' Edict For Athletes Draws Student Ire

By the Associated Press.

Marietta, Ohio, Jan. 13.—Some Marietta College students used paint and placards today to express disapproval of a "turn the other cheek" edict laid down for athletes by the administrative council, as Ohio conference officials were undecided whether the "no-slugging" rule should be made effective over the entire league.

The regulation laid down last week by the Marietta council decreed that a pioneer athlete found guilty of hitting an opponent, whether justified or not, should be declared ineligible in that sport for the remainder of the season. A second offense, the council said, would result in all-time ineligibility in all sports.

Students and faculty members who trudged to 8 o'clock classes today found Custodian Dad Elliott's usually immaculate sidewalks and library and administration building steps adorned with the following quips:

"No sluggin'; just huggin'."

"Turn thy cheek."

"We are proud of our athletics. Not of council."

A painted placard nailed to the stately old elm in front of the library bore the legend: "Administrative council fred—with enthusiasm—for new rule." Beside it was another—"We don't like it."

The council, composed of Dean D. T. Schoonover, Dean Slice Rosemond and Profs. H. R. Eggleston, T. W. Whipple, M. R. Patterson and E. L. Krause, declined to comment on the student agitation.

George Daniel, of Lorain, the Ohio Conference commissioner, asked if he thought the Marietta rule should be made conference-wide so as to place all athletes on an equal plane, replied:

"There are so many ramifications on this point when it comes to making it an Ohio Conference rule that I wouldn't even hazard a guess as to the reactions of our member institutions should the subject be brought up as an official matter of business."

Lee Ramage Gets Offer To Fight John Lewis

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—One year after starting a comeback, Lee Ramage, young San Diego heavyweight, received an offer today to fight John Henry Lewis in New York's Madison Square Garden next month.

Pop Foster, veteran manager, who took Ramage last January, said Jimmy Johnston, of the Garden, made the offer.

Foster has a verbal agreement for Ramage—who in the past year has punched out three knockouts, three decisions and a draw—to box Maxie Rosenbloom here February 2. Foster wants to make the date definite before signing with the Garden.

Weismuller Warns Against Fear of Water; Gives Tips on Breathing as First Lesson

Jack Medica, successor in the amateur swimming field to Johnny Weissmuller, is demonstrating the proper method of breathing—inhaling through the mouth, as explained in the accompanying article.

(This is the first of a series of lessons on swimming by one of the most famous stars ever known to the sport. Weissmuller, who left the amateur swimming ranks to become the Tarzan of movie fame, will appear in person at Loew's Capitol Theater starting tomorrow.)

By Johnny Weissmuller.

Don't be afraid of the water—regard it as a friend!

How often I heard these words from swimming coaches when I was a youngster, starting to paddle around in public pools! For my own confidence at first was very slow in asserting itself, and it wasn't until I had tried for exactly a year that I took my first swimming strokes in the shallow water of the Chicago River, near my home.

As I grew older I realized that it was this instinctive fear of the water that keeps thousands of people from enjoying the most ideal sport of all.

Therefore, in learning to swim, the first thing to do is conquer fear of the water once and for all. The way to do it is to become accustomed to water.

Salt water will support a man's body if he is perfectly relaxed. Fresh water will do the same if one uses a slight motion with the hands and feet.

The first lesson for the beginner to learn when fear of water is overcome is correct breathing.

In swimming the American crawl, it is necessary to reverse the method of breathing. First inhale through the mouth while the head is out of water, and exhale through the nose while the head is face down in the water.

Practice this method in the shallow end of the pool by putting the head in the water and exhaling through the nose all of the air in the lungs. Completely exhaust the lungs so the intake of air will be that much easier. Bring the face up and turn it to the left, take a quick breath through the mouth and then plunge under water while it is expelled.

With the aid of an ordinary inner tube inflated, and fastened around the center of the body, it is then possible to assume a regular swimming position while still in shallow water. With the tube as a support, grip the side of the pool with the hands while practicing the breathing exercise.

While the body is in a flat position on the water, the breathing becomes an easy turn of the head, which, when practiced, comes very naturally.

The importance of learning this breathing properly cannot be overemphasized. The entire success of advanced lessons in swimming depends upon proper breathing, and it should be practiced for several weeks, before attempting to go on further with swimming. Even champions practice this breathing from 5 to 12 hours without stopping, and it should be kept up by the beginner as long as possible.

Next comes the proper method of using the feet—kicking, which will be the topic of tomorrow's article.

Budge, Parker, Grant Score In Net Play

By the United Press.

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 13.—Carrying Davis Cup ambitions in the third major tournament of the Gulfstream Circuit, Don Budge, Frankie Parker and Bitsy Grant, the "one-two-three" of American tennis, slammed their way through the second round of the Dixie championships today.

Grant, the diminutive Atlantan who is defending the Dixie title, was carried to three sets before eliminating Bob Decker, youthful Miamian, who holds the Florida Junior Public Courts title.

Grant in Trouble.

Budge, National champion, and Parker, the Lawrenceville, N. J., schoolboy who is ranked No. 2 nationally, swept their matches without difficulty but were not overly impressive.

Seeking to set the stage for a finals meeting with Budge, Grant ran into difficulties with Decker's baseline game before running out a 6—3, 4—6, 6—0 victory.

The Atlanta atom found the colorful Miami youth difficult to pull out of position for his "softball game" and placements, but when he

Yarosz Is Winner Over Solly Krieger

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Teddy Yarosz, of Pittsburgh, former middleweight champion of the world, took a big step along the comeback trail tonight with a stirring 10-round victory over Solly Krieger, of Brooklyn. Yarosz weighed 159 and Krieger 160.

By turning back the conqueror of Harry Balsamo, the clever Yarosz placed himself in a spot to challenge the winner of the Freddie Steele-Eddie (Babe) Risko championship fight in Madison Square Garden next month. Steele and Risko agreed to terms today.

Tonight's bout in the New York Hippodrome attracted 5,000 fans, who paid $9,247.35.

Ski Meet Planned At Polo Grounds

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Armand Vincent, Canadian sports promoter, has leased the Polo Grounds for a three-day international sports carnival and ski meet on the afternoon and evening of February 20, 21, 22.

The Warm Springs Foundation and a committee, including Gov. Lehman and Mayor LaGuardia, organized to build two therapeutic pools in public hospitals here, will share in the receipts.

The three-day program will include ski-jumping, salmon racing, snowshoe racing and dog-sled racing.

Cronin to Make Shifts in Sox Lineup

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—Tom Yawkey, who has $3,600,000 invested in the sixth-place Boston Red Sox, listened today to Manager Joe Cronin's plans for making the investment good.

Joe recommended two players, two line-up changes and lots of patience, and Yawkey, the happiest sixth-place club owner in the business, agreed to everything.

Joe wants either Julius Solters, of the Browns, or Joe Vosmik, of the Indians. He also wants to change Pinky Higgins from third to second base and make room for a couple of youngsters in the outfield, but, as Yawkey pointed out, Solters and Vosmik are not for sale.

Still Sold on Cronin.

Yawkey took time out to squelch rumors that he's sold out on Cronin.

"I think the purchase of Cronin is the best deal I've made and I'd make the deal again tomorrow at twice the figure!" he said.

He was asked if he meant he'd pay $500,000 for Cronin.

"Sure," he replied, "he's one of the greatest guys I ever saw."

Nothing could down Yawkey's enthusiasm. Billy Evans, manager

54-Day Limit Is Provided For Meets

Prospects for Passage Good as Maryland's Opposition Lifted.

$500,000 a Year Taxes Seen; $6,000 Daily Licenses Set.

A new District racing bill modified to meet objections of Maryland race track owners will be introduced in the House today by Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee.

Prospects for passage of the bill are substantially better than last year because Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, has stated that he will not oppose the bill so long as it does not give the District an unfair advantage over Maryland tracks.

Representative Norton predicted that the measure, if enacted into law, will raise $500,000 a year in revenue and contribute that much toward reducing the anticipated $10,000,000 deficit.

Tax provisions of the bill are modeled after the Maryland law, Mrs. Norton said. Licensees will be charged $6,000 for each racing day and, in addition, will be taxed 15 per cent of their net revenue.

The District government, moreover, will levy a tax of 1 per cent on all money wagered.

O'Hara Has Option.

A board of three members to be named by the District Commissioners will supervise the track or tracks which may be established under provisions of the bill.

The measure restricts the local racing season to "not more than 54 days."

Another provision will bar minors from betting either at the track or elsewhere in the District.

Walter O'Hara, operator of the Narragansett race track, has an option on the old Bennings race track and proposes to build a "million dollar" track once racing is legalized in Washington.

With Palmisano's opposition withdrawn, the bill is likely to encounter its most serious obstacles in the Senate, where Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, blocked it three years ago on the eve of adjournment.

Last year the measure was never reported out of the judiciary subcommittee, of which Palmisano was chairman.

Pittsburgh Rally Nips Notre Dame Five, 34-31

Pittsburgh, Jan. 13 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh put on a last-period drive tonight to edge out Notre Dame, 34 to 31, in an intersectional basketball battle.

Pitt's Panthers overcame a first-half lead that Notre Dame snatched early in the contest and widened to 23 to 14 at the intermission. At one time in the opening period the score was Notre Dame, 19; Pitt, 7.

Hoyas' Early Lead Wiped Out by Victors' Second-Half Uprising.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 13.—A late rally fell short by two points as Georgetown suffered a 29 to 27 defeat in an Eastern intercollegiate basketball conference game at the hands of the Temple Owls tonight in Mitten Hall.

Philadelphians resorted to freezing during the last three minutes, determined to protect their four-point advantage. At that they were unable to keep possession of the ball and prevented Georgetown from tallying field goals only by the use of fouls.

Gibeau and Murphy each made good from the 15-foot mark in the closing minutes to bring the Georgetown total up to 27 points. Though Georgetown appeared to have the better of the going near the finish, they were unable to tally again.

It was a game that was marked by close guarding on the part of both teams. Each quintet made good nine foul attempts. Temple outscored Georgetown from the floor, 10 to 9.

Mike Bloom, the tall Owl center who score 23 points against Georgetown last year in Washington, had to be content with a pair of twin pointers and a foul goal. High scoring honors for the evening went to Eddie Kurtyka. The Hoya forward found the basket for five field goals to register 10 points for the losing cause. Steve Juenger was Temple's best point gatherer with 9.

Coach Mesmer's passers showed Philadelphia a fast passing team that handled itself well on the floor, and knew how to take its own shots off the back board and to keep the

Lt. Hamilton Will Go Out On Feb. 1

New Mentor Played End on '26 Team With Man He Replaces.

Middie Elevens Beat Army Twice in 3 Years Under Hamilton.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.—The appointment of Lieut. Thomas J. Hardwick as head coach of Navy football for the season of 1937, succeeding Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, was announced this afternoon by Lieut. Comdr. Andrew C. McFall, graduate manager of athletics at the Naval Academy.

Lieut. Hardwick, graduated from the academy in 1927, was a classmate of Lieut. Hamilton, and played with him on the Navy team for three years, including the season of 1926, when Navy was generally considered the leading college team. He will arrive in Annapolis about February 1. He is now attached to the U. S. S Arizona on the Pacific Coast.

Of special significance is the appointment of Hardwick to succeed Hamilton, as indicating the permanence of the system of football coaching at the Naval Academy by a graduate who is still in the service.

Lieut. Hamilton assumed the duties of head coach three years ago after a succession of coaches who were either not graduates of the Naval Academy or who had resigned from the service. His appointment was due to a strong feeling in the service, not only that Hamilton would be a successful coach, but that coaching at the Naval Academy could best be done by graduates still in the service.

Lieut. Hardwick is native Virginian and one of the few Navy players who had varsity experience before entering the academy. He had played on the team of Virginia Polytechnic and played for three years with Hamilton, Hardwick being an end and Hamilton the quarterback.

Beat Army Twice.

In 1934, the first season as coach for Hamilton, Hardwick was varsity end coach. He had previously been on the coaching staff at the academy in 1928 and 1929. In 1930, he had been assistant coach of the championship fleet team on the Pacific Coast.

Lieut. Hardwick is remembered as a hard and clever player, his work being particularly notable in the victory over Michigan at Baltimore in 1926 and the tie game with the Army, 21 to 21, in Chicago the same year.

Lieut. Hamilton, an aviation officer, will leave for sea duty shortly. During his three years incumbency as head coach, Navy teams have won two of three games from the Army, not having previously won a game from the Cadets for 13 years. The record of his teams for the three seasons was 19 victories and 8 losses.

Bluege Signs 16th Contract With Nats

Ossie Bluege, for 15 years a valued member of the Washington infield, signed his 1937 contract yesterday at the same salary he drew in 1936.

The signing of Bluege leaves 26 Washington players as yet unsigned.

The only other Washington players who have accepted their 1937 contracts are Pitchers Joe Cascarella, Harry Kelley and Johnnie Salveson and Second Baseman Buddy Meyer.

Whopper, indicated by arrow, starts move in the stretch to take lead from Tintagel (No. 4), who has led most of the way.

Giant Horse Circles Field of Fourteen; Collects $3,250.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Returning to competition for the first time since undergoing an operation for a serious ailment last July, Hal Price Headley's giant 5-year-old horse, Whopper, today ran a magnificent race to win the ninth Hialeah Park Inaugural Handicap, 6-furlong main attraction of the Miami Jockey Club's opening program. A representative crowd, estimated at 18,000, baked under a hot sun and saw the $5.90-for-$2 favorite in a field of 15 crack sprinters win by a head in 1:09 4-5, a new track record.

Marshall Field's Tintagel, hero of the 1935 Belmont Futurity, also returned to action in top form and barely lost the purse to the Lexington-owned horse. T. D. Buhl's Sweep Like, one of five horses grouped in the field, was third, two lengths back and three before Warren Wright's Count Morse.

Whopper's time was two-fifths of a second faster than the record held jointly by Coequel and Miney Myerson. He earned $3,250 in purse money and was ridden by Charlie Stevenson, leading American rider in 1935.

Fraidy Cat, stablemater of the winner; Chief Cherokee, Kerry Patch and White Cockade were scratched, the latter to start in the fifth event.

Stevenson Daring.

Whopper, under topweight of 122 pounds, was next to last at the break, which was a good one. Stevenson was daring and fortunate when he shot the big veteran up on the inside, getting through to reach Contention while Tintagel was showing the way by daylight to Sweep Like, Polycletus and Bright Haven. Whopper was sent around Tintagel after entering the stretch He ate up the ground in brilliant fashion under hard urging and wore down the pacemaker a step from the wire. Sweep Like ran a remarkably good race.

The ever popular Greentree Stable silks of Mrs. Payne Whitney were borne to victory in the first "baby" race of the Florida season as the long local meeting got under way before a banner crowd here today. Septime, a daughter of The Porter, carried the pink and black colors to a nose triumph at the long odds of $67.10 for $2. The bay lassie skipped the three furlongs in 0:33 2/5, thus equaling Idle Victory's track mark. Tea Leaves was second, two lengths before Miss Dolly Kay. Septime and Tea Leaves dominated all the running with Joe Wagner giving the victor a rousing ride to remain in front. Fifteen fillies competed.

Ideal Conditions.

The 46-day meeting opened under ideal conditions, with a warm sun beating down on a lightning fast racing strip. Some of the numerous changes made in the Miami Jockey Club's plant were innovations to spectators who had not visited Northern tracks, such as the judges and stewards stand being moved from the finish line to a spot atop the roof, where the new camera also is used; the unsaddling ring, fashioned after the one at Belmont Park, under which arrangement the winning thoroughbred is unsaddled and the jockey weighed in full view of the public; the new enunciator call system, which shows the running positions of the horses on the electric board in the infield, a system used at Empire City and Belmont Park last season, and the new Gray Australian barrier for juvenile races.

Four Eleven, representing Warren Wright's Calumet farm made a runaway of the seven furlong second race, restricted to 3-year-olds. With Irving Anderson, leading Tropical Park rider in the saddle, the Haste filly stole a lead of 10 lengths and merely coasted to the wire with five lengths to spare, paying $8.70. Her time was 1:24 flat. Say When was just as easily second, coming from third position in the stretch to beat Reckless by five lengths. The latter made up a world of ground.

Pays $107.70.

A long price that might stand as tops for the meeting came with the running of the third race of one and one-sixteenth miles, the first event to be decided over the turf course this season. Markme, from the Le Mar stock farm, scored by two lengths to return $107.70 for a two dollar straight ticket. Vitox, another rank outsider, nosed out Prince Dean for the place while the favored Espinaca was well beaten after showing some early speed. Markme broke slowly but improved his position steadily and shot past Vitox in the stretch to win going away. Joe Wagner was in the saddle to score the first double of the session.

"Morty" Mahony, generalissimo of the mutuels department, estimated after the fifth race that the day's handle through the Australian totalisator would total $275,000, or virtually the same as last year's Hialeah opening. The lack of show betting on the fifth event did not help to boost the figures, of course, for today.

The sixth race saw Bulwark, a $48.50 for $2 shot, adding one more stunning blow to figure experts. The 4-year-old Bull Dog colt came from close off the leaders to take command approaching the stretch turn. He held on in a drive, beating Furfiber by a length, with Brandon Prince a belated third. Mamas Choice carried the bulk of the play. She curled up after gaing early command.

First Dead Heat.

The first dead heat of the current meeting and the tenth of the Florida season developed when Mrs. Emil Denemark's Two Bob, coupled with Chief Cherokee, and Phil Bieber's Chancing, finished on even terms in the camera battle of the fifth event. Two lengths behind the pair came Ogden Phipps' White Cockade, the odds-on favorite in the field of five. Under the split mutuel pool, the Denemark entry paid $3.70 straight and $2.80 place, while Chancing returned $4.90 and $3.70. There was no show betting. The 1 mile was completed in the fast time of 1:36 1-5.

with me in the darkness. I was rushed for about a furlong. I could pick my way of course, my eyes were better than the man's.

"O. K. Tom," said my handler, hardly above a whisper.

"I'm ready," came a voice through the darkness.

I heard a thumping noise. We had arrived at a van. The tailgate had been lowered. My handler held me to one side as a horse was rushed down the tailgate. He was hardly out of the way before I was pulled up the incline and into the van.

I heard the engine grind into motion and felt the van moving. I had not had time to be frightened up to this stage. However, I was soon in a cold sweat. Why was I being rushed away? Where was I being taken? I had been sold unexpectedly before, but never literally carried out of my stall in the black of the night.

I thought over my conversations with Mother, Minty Dinty, Marlboro Man and Baldy Mac. Nothing that they had told me of their experiences seemed to compare with this situation. Was I being stolen? Who was that horse they had taken out of the van when I was put in it?

Mississippi State Drubs Cards, 41 to 28

C. U. Stages Futile Rally In Thriller

Spurt Ties Score 28-All in Final Period, But Foes Too Good.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Forty minutes of basketball proved to be Catholic University's undoing last night as the Cardinals dropped their second straight game, this time to a sharp-shooting Mississippi State quintet, 41-28.

Thirty-eight minutes would have been enough for "Fod" Cotton's men, for at the expiration of that time they would have had a 28-28 draw with the Bulldogs. The Cardinals, however, were in the midst of a scoring streak that had transported them out of the shadow of impending defeat and placed them on equal footing with their guests, and were willing to say "nuff."

Settle for Tie.

But when the timekeeper blew taps on his little tin horn two minutes later they gladly would have settled for a tie, or even a 30-to-28 defeat, for in that fleeting space of time Mississippi won everything but the mortgage on Catholic stadium.

Charley Walters and Bill Armstrong were the chief perpetrators of the Cards' defeat, pouring more leather through the basket in that time than a shoemaker uses in a year. The visitors exhibited a smooth attack, featuring one-hand, crook-armed shooting over the shoulder and an airtight defense that Catholic was unable to penetrate.

Zeke Brown, Sam Pagano and Hermie Schmarr led the second-half drive that not only brought their team from behind but threatened to win the ball game. Mississippi's glue-like defense stopped the trio in the final minutes, however, and the Cards were left stranded.

Card Ringmen Face Battle In Duke

Catholic University's ringmen were back in the full swing of training routine yesterday as intensive preparations for Saturday's duel with Duke, to be fought at Brookland, were launched. This match promises to be one of the high marks of collegiate fisticuffing this winter, and the seating arrangements in the gym are being rearranged to accommodate approximately 4,500 fans.

Meanwhile, at Maryland, the Terrapin punchers, victorious over Western Maryland last week, were taking things lightly—but not too lightly, with a confident air concerning Saturday's match with Richmond, which will be the lower half of a double bill. The basketball team clashes with Duke in the curtain-raiser.

Duke Is Tough.

Coach Eddie LaFond of Catholic entertains few illusions about his boys chances against Duke. The Blue Devils pack too much experience and ring craft for him to expect a victory. He does, however, expect the cards to throw plenty of leather, and the boys have similar ideas. With a break and a lot of fighting the Brooklanders hope to tie Duke, but even this sounds a bit far-fetched in view of the Southerners' plentiful supply of talent.

Ad Warren, Blue Devil tutor, has a potential championship combination under his wing and is making the most of the opportunity. Numbered among his men are two N. C. A. A. champions, Danny Farrar, welterweight, whose opponent will be Fred Mix, and Ray Matulewicz, light-heavyweight, who probably will meet Ed Dunne. Capt. Jack Kneipp, lightweight, and Matulewicz, also are Southern Conference champions. Every regular is a veteran, and a seasoned campaigner.

Maryland should not have much difficulty with Richmond, inasmuch as the Spiders have only three experienced men in the front line trenches. "Pewee" Wills, a flashy bantamweight, and Frank Tymosko, heavyweight, who were considered fixtures on the team, left school unexpectedly, and left the team in a helluva fix.

Wilson Swims Western.

Champion Retriever of 1936

Dilwyne Montauk Pilot, the sad-faced Chesapeake, who yesterday was awarded the Field and Stream Challenge Trophy, stamping him as the champion retriever of all breeds last year. The dog is owned by R. R. M. Carpenter, Jr., of Montchanin, Del., and is a full brother of the noted retriever, Skipper Bob.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

If there is a rush for toe plates and "how-to-pitch" literature by the youth of the country next spring then the great renaissance will probably be traceable to the document signed last week by young Bob Feller out in Cleveland.

POVICH.

With a major league background of only two months, Feller was tendered $10,000 for his pitching services for 1937 by the Cleveland Indians, thus providing the reformed Iowa farm boy his second great distinction. Last summer in a game against the Athletics, he struck out 17 batters to set a new American League record and last week he became the highest-paid rookie in the history of baseball.

In the natural course of events it requires a half-dozen years for a rookie to work himself into the $10,000 salary class. Eighty per cent of the big league players never attain that figure, what with salaries averaging $7,000, but Feller has achieved the select circle after few more than a dozen games in the big leagues.

It is a striking commentary on the value attached to pitching talent, but in Feller's case it is obvious why he was boosted from a $2,400 pitcher to a $10,000 performer during the off-season. His potentialities have captured the imagination of baseball men. Any lad who, in his first season in the big leagues, surpasses Rube Waddell's strikeout record that stood for more than 25 years may yet blossom into another Walter Johnson.

Until young Feller came along, the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio was baseball's highest-paid rookie. Even before he had set foot on a big league diamond or, in fact, even before he had seen a big league game, DiMaggio was in a position to demand and receive $8,000 for his first year's contract. His Coast league record was that brilliant and the Yanks were in dire need of outfielders.

The stipend in Feller's contract is a striking illustration of the upswing in baseball salaries. Walter Johnson pitched for the Washington club for $200 a month when he first was signed and three years later, as the league's strikeout king, the most famous pitcher of all time, he was drawing only $7,000 yearly.

After a sensational season in 1911, Johnson's salary was jumped from $7,000 to $12,000 by Clark Griffith, who took over the management of the Washington team during the winter of 1911-12. At that figure he was the highest-salaried player in baseball at the time, although a few years later Ty Cobb was emmanding salaries from Detroit that almost doubled Johnson's wage.

Johnson was a $12,000 pitcher in his three best seasons, 1912-13 and 14, but when the newly organized Federal League started angling for his services and dangled a $15,000 contract before his eyes, Griffith persuaded the Washington club owners to better that offer.

Thus it was that Johnson in 1915 signed a five-year contract with the Senators calling for $16,000 yearly. As a comparison with modern salaries, it is observed that in 1925, Lefty Gomez, of the Yankees, who is not to be mentioned in the same inhalation with Johnson in his palmy days, drew $20,000 for the 1935 season.

Before the American League was organized, in 1901, $2,400 a year was tops for any ball player, the clubs then having a salary limit. But with the formation of the American League, which resulted in more spirited bidding for the services of players, salaries were upped gradually.

Clark Griffith was a pitching star with the Chicago National League club in 1893 at the munificent salary of $1,800. The following season he reached the top rung of his profession when he was paid $2,400.

In 1907, Griffith managed the Chicago White Sox into the American League pennant, besides having a pitching record of 24 victories and only 7 defeats, yet he was drawing only $3,000 as a salary.

"The truth is," says Griffith, "that the American League was just getting started and did not have much of a bankroll. I was one of the organizers with Ban Johnson and Louis Comiskey and the plain facts are that I couldn't afford to pay myself more than $3,000. If I had given myself a higher salary, I wouldn't have known where to get the money to pay myself."

It is agreed among baseball men that no player ever will command again the $80,000 which Babe Ruth was paid by the Yankees in a single season. Ruth's salary was based chiefly on his magnetism at the gate and thus it was well for him that he converted himself from a pitcher to an outfielder. A pitcher works only every four days and Ruth would have been no $80,000 ball player had he not been performing every day.

McFarland and Ruge Star for Victors, Benjamin for W. Maryland.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.—Alan McFarland and Capt. Bob Ruge, Navy forwards, hit a fast pace this afternoon, to score 29 points between them and furnish the chief element of their team's basketball victory here over Western Maryland by 45 to 27. The Navy team was somewhat slow starting and did not get a real lead until late in the opening half, but came on with a mighty rush when it really started.

Three minutes from the start the Green Terrors led by 3 to 2, but their margin was overcome when McFarland made a double success from the line. McFarland, Ruge and Shamer then found the basket from the court and in spite of the many successes of Benjamin, visiting forward, on long shots, the Navy led by 26 to 14 as the half ended.

of the club's minor league affairs, came into the meeting and reported that the $50,000 spent by Yawkey in the minors last season won't produce a single player for the Red Sox this year and probably not one next.

Evans did say, though, that year after next they might get "two or three prospects." Yawkey was pleased about that.

Baseball men believe, however, the Red Sox have picked up three of the finest players produced in the minors last year. They are Outfielders Fabian Gaffke, of Minneapolis, and Buster Mills, of Rochester, and Second Baseman Bobby Doerr, of San Diego.

"A great deal of the success of our club depends on whether these three come through," Cronin said. "Rog Cramer is sure of a place in the outfield. But he's the only one."

Temple Noses Out Georgetown, 29-27

The Hoyas were the early pace setters and built up a 15-to-11 lead before the intermission. Shortly after the resumption of play in the second half, Temple jumped out in front. For half of this period, the advantage shifted from one team to the other. Finally Temple pulled away and managed to stay on top until the final gun.

Central, Western Jayvee Fives Win

The first annual interhigh schol junior varsity basketbal series opened yesterday with a couple of bangs as Wilson and Tech went down to crushing defeats before Central and Western, respectively. Central won, 22 to 11, and Western, 14 to 4.

Fanning and Hancock starred for Central, registering 18 points between them, as Wilson found itself powerless to stem the Blue and White drive. Hughes was Western's big gun, chalking up four field goals, or more than enough to win the game. No foul shots were made in this game, incidentally.

Grimm Signed To Boss Cubs For 1937

Pilot Won't Predict Flag, But Claims Damn Good, Battling Club.'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—Charles John Grimm whipped out his pen today, signed a contract to boss the Chicago Cubs again in 1937, and immediately went to work on some good and bad news for his hired men.

Grimm's signing took an item out of the baseball rumor market—a rumor that the genial gentleman farmer would be replaced as a result of the Cubs' failure to retain the National League title last season. His 1936 contract expired December 31, but Owner Phil K. Wrigley said the signing ceremony merely had been delayed until the day of the annual meeting.

Won't Predict Flag.

Ruddy and in high spirits, Grimm declined to stick his neck out by predicting the Cubs would win the 1937 championship, but he said emphatically that he would have "a damned good club in there battling." He was highly pleased with the deals that sent Lon Warneke to the St. Louis Cardinals for Rip Collins and Le Roy Parmelee, and Woody English to Brooklyn for Linus Frey.

"We're set now with Collins at first base," he said. "We'll miss Warneke, but Parmelee will satisfy me if he wins as many games for us (11) as he did for St. Louis.

"Tex Carleton will be a starting pitcher, because I'm going to keep on starting him whether he wins or loses. Curt Davis has had his tonsils out and writes me he is ready to go. Bill Lee, Larry French and Parmelee will be the other starters.

"I like Frey, he added, "because he is young, has power and can play second, third or short. English was a swell, loyal player, but he couldn't break into our combination, and I thought it only fair that he should be given a chance to play regularly."

Rosslyn Girls Beat Arcadia Pin Team

The Rosslyn girls defeated Arcadia to win two games in the Ladies' District League last night. Arcadia averted a shutout by taking the final game, 557 to 525.

Highway Engineering gained an odd-game decision over Swanee. Swanee's lone win came when they collected a 565 game, the best team score of the night. Temple eked out a two-game win over National Beer.

The league's activities will be postponed next week because of the Inauguration.

Everett (Peanuts) Pierce, well known to patrons of the Arcadia alleys, where he was employed, was married yesterday afternoon to Esther May Newman. They were married by the Rev. Mr. Sowers in Alexandria.

In an intercity match between the Sterrett Operating Service of Baltimore and Washington, rolled at the Convention Hall alleys, the local five swamped the visitors, four games out of five, to win by a score of 2,602 to 2,496.

Pinto, Garibaldi Meet Tonight For Riches, 'Meanest Man Title'

By Bill McCormick.

"The meanest man in the world" title will be officially decided tonight when Stanley Pinto and Gino Garibaldi get together in a brawl which has been laughingly billed as a wrestling match.

Garibaldi has spent months building up his reputation for meanness. The villain has launched enough kicks to win an international soccer match, strangled more necks than a carload of freshly laundered stiff collars, thumbed out eyes with the reckless abandon of Little Jack Horner extracting plums from his pudding and otherwise conducted himself as no gentleman.

Was Gentle Performer.

Pinto, one of the most experienced performers on the mat, for years was a gentle performer who hewed to his scientific wrestling and let the gyps fall where they may. All of which gave Stanley no end of personal satisfaction, but failed to make him a good drawing card.

"My word!" or the wrestling equivalent, exclaimed Pinto one day while checking over his bank balance and finding only $1,326.-754.98 deposited to his credit. "My word! I am indeed a veritable bum in this wrestling racket to have been working all these years and to remain practically a pauper as rasslers go. I must do something ere my youth has ebbed and I can no longer earn an honest dollar.'

In communion with himself, Stanley decided that what he needed in his business was more ferocity. Eureka! He would discard his gentle tactics and become a villain.

"Strangle!" Gurgles Mayes.

No sooner said than done and Pinto displayed a brand of A-1 villainy in his next match that endeared him forevermore with the fanatics. In this match he was pitted against Mayes McLain, a very popular young fellow. No sooner had Sam Ugle tweeted the starting whistle than Stanley charged across the ring and clamped a pair of very business-like legs around McLain's windpipe.

"Strangle!" gurgled McLain.

"Strangle!" shrieked the crowd.

But Stanley just kept squeezing, soon scwushing the very consciousness, nay, almost the very soul, out of Mayes' poor body. The referee counted out McLain, but a physician who examined the inert body a few seconds later opined that Mayes had been subdued by illegal strangling.

"Kill dat bum!" roared the assemblage, and Pinto was firmly ensconced in the public heart.

In the 30-minute preliminaries John Katan will tackle Ernie Powers; Mike Mazurki will have it out with Hans Kampfer; Hank Barber will grapple Jim Wright and George McLeod will engage Babe Caddock.

Colonials Meet Wake Forest Tonight

George Washington's game with Wake Forest, to be committed in the H street gym, tops a slim program of three games on the collegiate menu tonight. Maryland entertains its arch rival, Western Maryland, at College Park, and St. John's will be American University's guest in the other two.

Traveling in high gear toward an undefeated record, and boasting six consecutive victories, the Colonials are expected to dispose of the Deacons without working up a good sweat. That is unless Wake Forest's courtmen prove to be as annoying as its football team, the memory of which is decidedly unpleasant to the downtown school.

Maryland Has Edge.

Maryland appears to have the edge in its game, inasmuch as Western Maryland's basketball teams are just so-so. Georgetown swamped the Terrors, 46-16, in the initial appearance here before the Christmas holidays, and the up-State tossers have been having their troubles since. Fresh from a two-game invasion of Virginia that saw them swamp V. M. I. after being swamped by Washington and Lee, the Terps have too much rhythm and reserve power for their opponents.

American hasn't being doing well lately, as well as Coach Walter Young would like, and, consequently, will be the underdog against the Bay City quintet. The Eagles lost a heartbreaker Saturday to Hampden-Sydney, being nosed out in the last few seconds of play and bowing by a 30-26 count.

Montgomery Beats Friends Five, 26-23

On the Air Today

The motion picture industry is beginning to eye askance the use of its stars in radio programs at hours when those same stars are flickering on the screens of picture houses over the country. According to Motion Picture Daily, the film barons are becoming aware of the fact their stars are placed in competition with themselves every time they make a radio appearance in the peak evening hours of theater attendance.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is the first to plan a policy in regard to radio. It is expected in formal announcement in the near future. And indications are it will be the forerunner of policy statements by other studios.

M-G-M apparently is prepared to back up its policy, when it is made known. The company recently rejected a deal by which its stars would be made available exclusively for a one-hour program weekly in the interests of Ford. The program was to have replaced the Fred Waring series, recently ended, for 52 weeks at $25,000 a week.

Motion Picture Daily recently made a survey showing that 80 per cent of the film personalities participating in radio appeared on programs between the hours of 8 and 9:30 at night—the peak attendance period for cinema palaces.

It will be recalled that Dick Powell's withdrawal from "Hollywood Hotel" is due to his picture contract calling for radio appearances exclusively as well as picture work.

Except Sundays. The film contract covers only week days.

As a result there is now talk that Haven MacQuarrie's "Do You Want to Be an Actor?" will be abandoned after the 13 weeks now under contract and that a new show will replace it, placed through Warner Brothers-Trans-America and starring Powell.

All of which brings up an interesting situation. On one hand the exhibitor complains that a star on the air keeps people away from seeing that star on the screen. But on the other hand we have a studio contracting to place one of its stars on a commercial program—and in the heart of the evening period usually bringing the maximum in theater attendance.

Excitement prevails in the rival network camps as the Inauguration date nears. Everyone will be trying to outdo everyone else. It is interesting to note that a great many commercial programs will be canceled next Tuesday while the mobile trucks, airplanes, blimps and other ingenious locations for microphones bring the Nation the story of the Inauguration. It is one special event broadcast that costs the networks revenue.

Foreign Buying Lifts Wheat 1⅜c a Bushel

Corn Futures Advance to Highest Point in Ten Years.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—Owing largely to reports that both Germany and Italy are purchasing grain in Argentina, wheat scored 1⅜ cents a bushel maximum advance here late today. Contributing to the upward trend of wheat values were official advices that the greater part of Kansas is covered with sleet, a circumstance implying likelihood of crop damage. Corn and oats alike rose to new high price records which in the case of corn outdid ten-year peaks.

At the close, wheat was ⅛ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish, May 1.35@1.35⅛, July 1.17⅛@¼, September 1.12⅜ to ½, corn ¼ to ¾ up, May, new 1.17⅞@1.12⅛, July, new 1.07¼@1.07⅜, September 1.03, oats ½ to ⅞ advanced, May 54⅛, and rye varying from ⅝ off to 1¼ gain, May 1.13¾. Provisions results were 10 to 17 cents down.

The Market

Stocks Weaken Near Close After Advance in Early Trading; Government Bonds Lower.

New York, Jan. 13.—On a sales volume of around 3,000,000 shares the stock market worked irregularly higher and then weakened on profit taking shortly before the close. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent higher at 135 cents a bushel. Foreign exchanges were unchanged.

The principal development of immediate interest to the securities markets was the lifting by one-sixteenth per cent the rate on short term bankers bills. Recently the rate on Treasury discount bills also has been creeping forward, and rumors, although so far without foundation, have heard of higher call rates. The higher bankers bill rate, as well as the stiffer terms now facing the Treasury, is less indicative of any fundamental change in money conditions than it is of the belief that, no matter what may be done with credit control, any near future changes in interest rates will be higher. The bottom for low money undoubtedly has been reached.

Gold imports now are being sterilized. Silver purchases are growing smaller, so that their effect on lifting excess bank reserves grows less. Commercial demand for bank credit is steadily expanding. Commodity prices are rising and in nearly every direction demand is beginning to cut down the space between it and supply of credit. The distance still is considerable, and no one would worry were it definitely known just what the authorities intend to do. It is still more or less taken for granted that the Federal Reserve Board will carry out its plan to lift reserve requirements, which will cut further into excess reserves.

Money.

If that be done money here might actually be tightened, especially if banks have to borrow at the Reserve, sell their Government bonds, or call in credit lines in order to build up reserves. By no means all banks have an excess of reserves at this time. The current tendency of rates to harden perhaps is less because of scarcer money than it is because of the fear of it. If all the banks once become convinced that rates will go up, then just on that account they may go up—for a while at least.

Uneasiness over the possibility of higher money rates and the steady whittling down of Government bond prices on that account have taken effect upon the Federal Reserve Board. It was rumored here recently that some feet were growing cool under the credit control desks at Washington. Those rumors apparently were confirmed today by press reports that the Federal Reserve Board would take no action this month on the proposed higher reserve requirements.

Meanwhile the decline in Government bond prices continued, putting still another smudge upon the carefully prepared statements from time to time issued by the Administration that high Government bond prices are proof that the Government's credit is sound. The fact is that Government bonds are following money rates, paying no great attention to the question of Uncle Sam's credit standing. So long as the Government can maintain exceedingly low interest rates, the bond market will hold; but some people wonder if such power over money is absolute.

Power Stocks.

Irregularity persisted in stocks, but the activity of the issues which found a good demand overshadowed the declines in others. Public utility stocks were the favorites, although their gains were moderate. Sales volume was heavy in the low-priced area. Motor stocks were narrow. Yellow Truck continued to move ahead, but climbed slowly. Steel shares were firm to fractionally lower.

Mail order stocks turned strong. Rails brought higher prices in most cases. Metals backed and filled. Stocks to rise 1 to 8 points were American Metals, Crown Cork, Container, Foster Wheeler, Kinney preferred, Kresge preferred, Louisiana Oil preferred, Newport, Panhandle preferred, Procter & Gamble, on its dividend news, and Scot Paper.

Sloss Sheffield was run up 15 points on a few sales, showing how easy it is to put a stock up when the supply outstanding is small and when some traders know about it and aren't afraid of hindrance.

Limits Removed On Foreign Copper

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—Copper companies operating under the international restriction agreement announced today that all restrictions on production had been removed temporarily, effective tomorrow. The copper restriction agreement applies to production in Europe, Africa, South America and Canada. United States output is not involved.

Copper for domestic delivery remains at 12.50 cents a pound, while yesterday export copper was sold at 12.72-12.75 cents a pound. Some transactions were reported today at 13.05 cents a pound, delivered at European base ports.

Sloss since the close of last year has jumped 46 points. American Zinc 6 per cent preferred climbed 22 points on its first appearance in several weeks. The price of 100, the highest since 1929, brought the stock in line with the exchange ratio of 1 share of $5 prior preferred and 6 shares of common.

Bill Rates.

The increase in bill rates was perhaps a natural sequel to all the talk which has been going around about a coming increase in short-term money rates. This talk had the effect of keeping buyers of bills out of the market, just as it caused bidders for Treasury bills to have more positive ideas as to the price they should bid for such investments. The higher yield rates quoted today for acceptances still left buyers on the sidelines. Probably they will watch the market to see if there is likelihood of a further increase in yield rates.

Speculation.

Attempts by other exchanges to secure business now going to the New York Stock Exchange continue. The San Francisco Curb is asking the SEC for permission to trade in Studebaker and United Aircraft, and the Philadelphia Stock Exchange wants to trade in Studebaker and Bethlehem. Those who have their pulse on the hands of the Nation apparently feel a quickening of the speculation beat.

Public Utilities.

The surge in public utilities is somewhat of an anomaly in an inflation market, but may be logically explained on the ground that while inflation is the goal of many speculators, the most pronounced effects of it will not be felt for some time. In other words, wages and raw materials costs will require some time yet before they outstrip the ability of public utilities, railroads and other industries with more less fixed selling prices to change them. Looked at from the standpoint of how much earning power a dollar will buy, the investor can find much to recommend utilities. The speculator also finds the field full of low-priced issues. How safe such buying may prove to be depends somewhat on the Government's policy toward public ownership and the breakup of the holding companies. Just now the pendulum is swinging toward confidence, but it ought not to be followed blindly.

With a dead weight tonnage of 18,500 tons, the new oil carrier will also be the largest commercial vessel under construction in American shipyards.

Steel Output Holds Despite Auto Strikes

Operating Rate 79½% With Higher Activity at Pittsburgh.

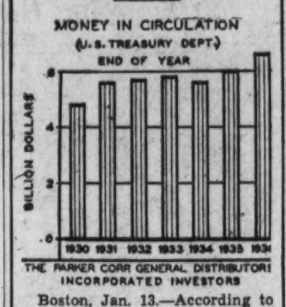
New York, Jan. 13.—"Steel ingot production is unchanged this week at 79½ per cent of the country's capacity notwithstanding the automobile strikes," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today. The review adds:

"The Pittsburgh district, least affected by suspensions of automobile tonnage, is operating at 80 per cent, one point up from last week and the highest rate for that district in more than six years. There have been gains elsewhere, notably at Youngstown, in southern Ohio and at Birmingham. While there have been declines in some other steel producting centers, they are no more than would normally occur from week to week under most favorable circumstances.

"Exceptionally heavy backlogs in nearly all products, but particularly in sheets, bars, shapes, plates, wire and tin plate, are enabling most companies to maintain their average activity at approximately its recent rate. Unless the automobile strikes extend to other companies or are long drawn out, there may be no appreciable change in steel mill operations during the next few weeks.

"The outcome of the automobile strikes is likely to have an important bearing on the possibility of a steel strike within the near future."

Per Capita Cash Increases to $52



Boston, Jan. 13.—According to the Treasury Department, the total amount of money in circulation at the end of December, if evenly distributed, would put $52 into the pocket of each man, woman and child in the country. This is the largest year-end amount of cash in circulation in our history and is exceeded only by the amount in March, 1933, during the bank holiday.

Scrap Steel Prices At 12-Year High

New York, Jan. 13 (AP). — Dow, Jones & Co. said today scrap steel quotations at Pittsburgh were at the highest level since January, 1925.

A sale of No. 1 heavy melting material to a District mill at $20 a ton advanced the quotation on that grade 50 cents to a range of $19.75 @$20.25. The 1929 high was $19.25, it was stated. The 1925 top was $22.

20,000 Jobs Refilled By Rail Express

Growing Business Gives Positions Back to Laid-off Workers.

Duluth, Jan. 13.—"Business gains throughout the country have been so rapid that Railway Express Agency has had to re-employ 20,000 furloughed employes," declared L. O. Head, president, on his arrival in Duluth today. The express executive, who is on the last leg of a 10,000-mile business survey tour including the principal industrial and commercial centers of the country, expressed the greatest enthusiasm over improved business conditions, instancing gains in Railway Express volume of from 15 to 28 per cent and in air express over 75 per cent in many centers. These figures represent gains in business for 1936 over 1935.

"Express districts throughout the country established quotas for 1936 and most of these quotas were reached or passed, one such goal having been bettered by more than a million shipments," Head declared. "We know that our Christmas business this year was larger than at any season since 1929, even though the complete figures are not yet in. Indications are that the final tabulation of the holiday traffic will pass even our most optimistic expectations."

Steel Prices Unchanged.

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Steel bar prices unchanged.

$50,000,000 Great Northern Bonds Offered

3¾ Per Cent Refunding Issue Is Priced at 97½.

An offering of $50,000,000 Great Northern Railway Co. general mortgage 3¾ per cent bonds, Series I, is being offered today by a group of investment banking houses headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. The bonds are dated January 1, are due in 30 years and are priced at 97½ per cent and interest.

Proceeds of the sale of these bonds with additional funds from the company's cash resources, supplemented if necessary by short-term borrowing, will be used to retire $61,028,000 outstanding prior lien issues.

The new bonds are redeemable as a whole or in blocks of $5,000,000 or more, at the company's option, on nine weeks' notice to January 1, 1942, at 105, with successive reductions of 1 per cent in the redemption price for each five-year period to January 1, 1962, and thereafter at par.

The company's net income for 10 months of last year was $6,332,429 which compares with $5,186,025 in the same period of 1935. The company estimates that its fixed charges, based upon its capitalization after giving effect to this financing and to the retirement of the prior lien bonds mentioned, will amount to $14,900,000, which would have been covered by income available for fixed charges for every year from 1927 to date except 1932.

Associated with Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., as underwriters are: J. & W. Seligman & Co., Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., Edward B. Smith & Co., The First Boston Corporation, White, Weld & Co., Lee Higginson Corporation, Kidder, Peabody & Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., and Lazard Freres & Co., Inc.

Cargo of Gold Stowed in Vault At Fort Knox

Armored Cars, Machine Guns Guard Transfer From Special Train.

By the Associated Press.

Fort Knox, Ky., Jan. 13.—Muzzles of armor-piercing guns protected the first installment of $4,000,000,000 of the Nation's gold hoard which was deposited in the Treasury's new vault here today.

Escorted by combat cars of the mechanized First U. S. Cavalry, long heavy Army trucks shuttled back and forth all morning between a special train which brought the $200,000,000 first shipment from Philadelphia. Sentries with machine guns patrolled a line 100 yards from the four mail coaches in which the metal was shipped.

Shortly after noon, the last truck had backed beneath the 3-inch thick steel sliding doors at the rear of the vault and the first shipment was pronounced complete.

The bullion was the first shipment in furtherance of a Government policy of safeguarding the treasure against invading armies.

A "dummy train," consisting of an engine and several box cars, an oil tank and a passenger coach, puffed into Fort Knox today. A few hundred yards behind it came the gold train. Its shaded windows gave no sign of the armed men crouching within, machine gunners of the mechanized cavalry lined up about the train. Traffic was diverted. Armored fighting cars, each mounting an armor-piercing rifle and heavy machine guns, escorted the trucks to the new vault.

Nobody except Treasury officials and a few high Army officers was allowed inside the depository where the gold was checked and stowed inside the cube of chilled steel, constructed to repel any tool or weapon known to man.

Technically, the depository and its grounds are under the Treasury's authority, but the huge arsenals of Fort Knox surround the vault.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mint director, declined to say how much gold was put in storage today or when other shipments will be made.

Laughlin Trial Gets Under Way

Charged with forgery, embezzlement, larceny and larceny after trust, James J. Laughlin, Washington attorney, went on trial late yesterday in District Court before Justice Peyton Gordon.

The trial was delayed several days when Laughlin filed an affidavit of prejudice against Justice James M. Proctor and the latter withdrew from the case. Laughlin's two attorneys, E. Russell Kelly and Myron Ehrlich, were granted permission to withdraw because of the filing of the affidavit.

Yesterday, George D. Horning, jr., a former assistant United States attorney, announced he had been retained to act as Laughlin's counsel. The trial, which barely got under way, is expected to last several days. Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly is prosecuting the case.

Ex-Convict Admits Shooting in Plot

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 13 (AP).—Sheriff Joe Bauml said tonight a former convict had confessed shooting his employer in a blackmail plot and driving him about the country 12 hours after discovering that an abandoned well where he planned to hide his victim had been filled in.

The former convict, Robert Metzger, was jailed here.

C. Arthur Russell, 50, Wichita mine operator who employed Metzger as chauffeur, was in a critical condition.

Bauml said Russell told him Metzger and others stripped him of most of his possessions by threatening to tell officers Russell had slain his wife more than two years ago. Physicians, who attended Mrs. Metzger, said she died a natural death, the Sheriff stated.

Honored by Workers

ALEXANDER HECHT,

president of The Hecht Co., who celebrated his seventieth birthday, was honored by employes in a testimonial "community sing" at the store. The store workers were gathered en masse and as Hecht was ushered in by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, and George M. Quirk, vice president and store manager, the strains of "Happy Birthday to You" burst forth. Beginning with the year 1867, the date of Hecht's birth, popular songs of the day were rendered, representing periods of each ten years. On behalf of the executive staff, a floral tribute was presented by George M. Quirk, store manager, and to culminate the ceremony, Dulcan presented him with a testimonial plaque.

Gambling Squad Arrests 36 Men; Equipment Taken

Thirty-six men were arrested late yesterday when police raided an alleged gambling establishment in the 900 block of New York avenue northwest.

Led by Lieut. John Fondell, the officers entered the establishment through a coal chute. They met no resistance, and at the First Precinct Station, where the prisoners were taken in patrol wagons, it was understood all would be charged with disorderly conduct.

Police seized blackboards, telephones, dice and race horse slips in the raid. The place, Fondell said, evidently was a combination of betting and dice playing establishment.

Briton Suspected In Slaying of Girl

Peiping, Jan. 13 (AP).—Pathologists indicated tonight they had found human blood on articles in the home of a foreign suspect held in the death of Pamela Werner, 17-year-old British girl.

It also was reported the man was a necrophile, whose morbid interest in the dead had led him to witness many Chinese executions. Police withheld his identity, hinting only that he was a Briton, allegedly with a police record in Chicago. He knew the Werner family and had admired the girl, they indicated. She was the daughter of a former British consular official. Her mutilated body was found January 8 in an outlying neighborhood.

Bullitt in Paris Parley.

Paris, Jan. 13 (AP).—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt conversed at length today with Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos during the course of what officials insisted was a "courtesy call." French press reports, however, hinted war debts were discussed.

FHA Envisions Home-Building Boom This Year

450,000 Non-Farm Units May Be Constructed, McDonald Says.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Housing Administration looked forward yesterday to a 1937 home-building rush only slightly below that of 1929.

Stewart McDonald, the housing administrator, predicted between 400,000 and 450,000 nonfarm dwelling units would be constructed this year, an increase of nearly 50 per cent over 1936. He estimated the 1929 total at 50,000.

Reports for last week were not complete, but McDonald estimated it had placed $700,000,000 in new business on the books of his agency.

The Housing Administration does not lend money but insures construction mortgages. From its beginning in 1934 to December 1, 1936, McDonald said, it transacted business totaling $1,125,839,240. This included home mortgages accepted for insurance, modernization and repair notes insured and commitments on large scale housing projects.

Furthermore, McDonald said, the Federal housing program had "generated" more than $2,000,000,000 of modernization and repair work which did not show in its records. He said it had created the equivalent of one year's work for 2,000,000 men.

The administrator expressed belief that more than 250,000 homes were constructed in 1936.

21 Americans Held Prisoners By China Reds

Are Detained in Sianfu to Protect the City From Nanking Planes.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, Jan. 13.—Rebels seeking to establish a Communist government in central China held 21 Americans virtual prisoners tonight behind the walls of Sian-fu, ancient capital of Shensi Province.

Authoritative word received here, dated January 9, said the Americans and other foreigners had been prevented from leaving the city and that it was feared they might be held as hostages so that the Nanking government's planes would not bomb Sian-fu.

The message declared the gates in the 30-foot walls of the city were barred, that civilians were under strict surveillance and that radio, telegraph and mail communication had been halted.

A tight censorship was reported to have been applied to out-going messages.

The Americans were believed to be mostly missionaries and businessmen, with their families.

Newspapers reported Nanking's troops already had fought a large Communist force north of Sian-fu.

The official Central News Agency, meanwhile, said a force of "Communist bandits" was reported marching on the City of Lanchow, in Kansu Province, just west of Shensi. An unknown number of American missionaries were at Lanchow.

The attacking force was said already to have seized Pingliang, east of Lanchow and near the Shensi border.

Sian-fu is the provincial capital where Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang led a mutiny December 12 and held Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, premier of the central government, as prisoner for 13 days. Marshal Chang subsequently came to Nanking with the Generalissimo and was sentenced to imprisonment but pardoned.

Scientist Says 'Baby Atoms' Born of 'Blasted' Parents

'Smashing' of Tiny Particles Is Really Process of Evolution, Chicago University Physicist Tells World.

By the Associated Press.

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 13.—The discovery of a new principle of nature showing evolution at work among the atoms was described here today by William D. Harkins, Chicago University physicist, who is at Cornell this year as Baker nonresident lecturer.

The destruction of atoms, in which the scientific world has believed for 17 years, Prof. Harkins finds is really the birth of atoms in new form.

His experiments to prove existence of the "baby atoms," published this month in scientific journals, already have been accepted widely by atomic scientists. The new point of view is important in the alchemy which already has made a slight beginning by transforming numerous chemical elements into something else, including transmuting platinum into gold.

Since Lord Rutherford in 1919 discovered particles of radium acting like bullets to "smash" other atoms, scientists have been building more and more powerful smashing machines. They have believed their blows broke the atoms.

Instead, Prof. Harkins finds the so-called "bullets," which are hydrogen and other particles, merely penetrate into the other atom. There is no instantaneous smashing, he says, but a new "intermediate" atom is formed.

The intermediate lasts from a minute fraction of a second to days or years. Then it breaks into new atoms, the "babies" may be either the same as the parent or a different chemical material.

Under Prof. Harkins' idea that the "atom-smashing" is not disintegration, but really atom-building chemicals widely different may be united as soon as science develops the right tools.

Social Workers Back Ihlder Plan

The District Chapter of the American Association of Social Workers Tuesday night approved in principle recommendations made by its housing committee for the administration of permanent public housing laws.

The recommendations, made by John Ihlder, chairman of the committee and head of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, included demands that Federal participation in public housing be made through assistance to local public agencies or to limited dividend or co-operative housing companies; that a central Government housing agency be authorized to make grants to State or local housing agencies for slum reclamation; make loans to be used for reclamation purposes, acquire, construct and manage low-rent housing demonstration projects when asked to do so by local authorities.

In his report, Ihlder specified that his committee's recommendations dealt only with proposed national legislation on public housing.

'Blacklisting' Ban.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, said yesterday he was drafting an amendment to the Copeland safety-at-sea act, which would make "blacklisting" of seamen a criminal offense. The amendment is a result of protests by seamen who attacked the continuous discharge book provision of the act.

Clews Pile Up Against Porter In Tub Slaying

Colored Man Held; First Degree Murder Charge to Be Placed.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—Queens County authorities prepared tonight to rush prosecution of a colored man charged with the "bathtub" killing of Mary Robinson Case as they mounted circumstantial evidence against his denials.

Both Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine and Queens Prosecutor Charles P. Sullivan flatly charged the suspect, Major Greene, 33, with the slaying of the comely 25-year-old housewife.

Greene, porter employed in the apartment building in which the former Lancaster, Pa., belle was strangled and hammered to death Monday afternoon, was arrested early today.

Against Greene's repeated assertions that it was "not me," District Attorney Sullivan listed evidence tending to link him with the crime.

Fingerprints and a bloodstained pair of trousers which the killer discarded down the incinerator chute—apparently in the mistaken belief the fire was burning—were the principal clews.

The trousers bore a tell-tale dry cleaner's mark. They were traced to a tailor shop three doors from Greene's tenement flat.

Prosecutor Sullivan said he would seek a first degree murder indictment tomorrow.
